North Lincoln health dilemma hard to answer

By Deb Gray and Gracia McAndrew
Star Staff Writers

Some north Lincoln residents currently are faced by a lack of accessible physicians and health care facilities.

Consequently, they are urging community health planners and providers to examine possible solutions to the shortage.

The dilemma is particularly acute for a large number of elderly and low income people living in north Lincoln, because they often do not have access to private transportation, said the Rev. Jim Cooke of the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

In a recent informal survey, some elderly persons living in northeast Lincoln reported they spent as much as $5 for the round-trip cab fare to physicians' offices, Cooke said. Others said a round trip by bus took as long as five hours.

Northeast Lincoln, bordered by O Street and the east side of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln city campus, has 27% of the city's population, according to the 1970 census. But only 5% or about 13 (based on 1975 records) of Lincoln's physicians work there.

Not included in that 5% figure are the 20-some physicians who have offices in the Gateway vicinity.

North of Vine-it's worse

Cooke, a member of the Northeast Lincoln Health Planning Project, also said the situation would be worse if the area's south boundary were moved seven blocks north to Vine Street. Then, "a percentage of physicians couldn't even be counted," he said. "It narrows down to five physicians all together."

"The statistics are not terrible, terrible statistics if we thought more physicians would be coming into the area," said Colleen Seng of the University Place Community Organization. "But the problem is going to get worse."

The situation can't be any worse than it is now in northwest Lincoln, "where there are zero physicians," said Dick Schonberger, UNL professor of management and a member of the Northwest Lincoln Community Association.

Blaming the lack of physicians on the lopsided distribution of Lincoln's three major hospitals — all located south of O Street — Schonberger said the "hospital locations have a far-reaching effect on the entire medical system."

"If all the hospitals are on one end of Lincoln, that is where the doctors will locate," he said. "That is Lincoln's history."

Although the complaints seem "justified by the very face that a number of people are voicing the problem," Jane Ford, executive director of the Southeast Nebraska Health Systems Agency, indicated the prospect of building a fourth major hospital in north Lincoln appears remote.

125 beds needed by 2000

According to a recent HSA staff study, Lincoln will need no additional hospital beds until 1990, when only 14 more might be needed. The projection for the year 2000 is an additional 125 beds.

Others involved in city health planning indicated that two vacant floors atop Lincoln General could provide for future bed needs. Also, St. Elizabeth Health Center was constructed so that additional floors could be added if the need for more beds arose.

Still, suggested solutions for north Lincoln residents' immediate problems included active recruitment of physicians, similar to what some of Nebraska's rural communities are doing, or the development of greater public transportation services for those living on the edges of the city.

Community organizations in north Lincoln have not prepared specific proposals for solutions to the shortage. But Cooke and Schonberger agreed that one potential solution would be the establishment of satellite health care facilities in that area.

Satellite centers would provide greater accessibility to health care for more people, they said. The units could provide routine out-patient care, basic medical tests and/or screening patients to determine if further medical treatment is necessary.

Hospitals should do it, he says

It should be the obligation of existing hospitals to establish these satellite facilities, Cooke added.

"Our feeling is that those institutions (hospitals), which are in the business of delivering health care to the public, ought to accept the wide range of responsibilities of health care delivery," he said.

"They should be willing to deliver some kind of health care to all parts of the city and county, even if they can't make a profit at it."

"I know that can hurt," he added, "but when you are in the business of serving the public, you should do that before doing anything else."

But hospital officials say they can't discount the cost factor in undertaking such a facility.

"You can't disregard the economic aspects" of such a proposition, said Ronald Wachter, spokesman for Bryan Memorial Hospital. "Someone has to pay for it one way or another."

"Lincoln is not that large," said Bob Brungard, administrator of Lincoln General. "So, it would be much less expensive for people to go to existing facilities, rather than support service to that area."

Considering the public's "hue and cry" whenever a hospital proposes an expansion plan, Brungard added, "we would be remiss if, on one hand, we try to avoid that kind of thing and then go out and build another kind of facility (satellite unit)."

Outpatient increase predicted

Besides, since predictions indicate there will be an increase in outpatient facilities, "why go out and set up more facilities with expensive equipment, when they already exist in Bryan, Lincoln General and St. Elizabeth?" Wachter asked.

"We hear that people have a problem in that area and I'm sure they do," Brungard added, "but we have to find out what is the best way to get it (health care) to them. Some needs assessments and determinations need to be made."

County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, a member of the HSA board, agreed. He said agencies that govern health care proposals should study the problem, then compile a report that "lays out all possible solutions."

Hamilton said physicians customarily locate their offices close to hospitals — a "backwards" practice that is convenient for the providers (doctors), while what is convenient for the consumers is looked at secondarily.

Summit sabotage charged

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — The Palestinian-Moslem and Christian-Syrian forces in Lebanon's civil war accused each other Sunday of launching attacks to sabotage a mini-summit meeting of six Arab leaders trying to end the fighting.

The Palestinian guerrilla command accused Syrian forces of shelling a besieged resort town some 10 miles east of Beirut. In turn, the right-wing Lebanese Christian militias claimed the Palestinians and their leftist Moslem allies had mounted a series of assaults.

At the summit meeting in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said the war hinges on the status of the Palestinian refugees in Lebanon, Cairo's Middle East News Agency reported.

It quoted Sadat as saying a settlement should be based on an Arab guarantee of the Palestinians' existence in Lebanon "in exchange for a Palestinian commitment to observe the Cairo agreement." That 1969 accord restricted the movement of Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

The Arab leaders opened their conference with a three-hour secret meeting Sunday night and planned to meet again Monday.

The six are Sadat, President Hafez Assad of Syria, Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat, Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, Saudi King Khaled and Kuwait ruler Sheikh Sabah al-Salem al-Sabah.

Other points of the Egyptian plan, according to the Cairo news agency, include:

— Lebanon would be united under Sarkis to avoid partition, with all factions brought together in a reconciliation conference.

— Oil-rich Arab states would set up a special fund to rebuild the war-shattered Lebanese economy.

— An Arab force would be established to police a cease-fire and supervise the implementation of the Cairo agreement.

More than 50 previous truces have collapsed, despite the presence of a small Arab League peace-keeping force.

After the Sunday meeting, the Arab leaders ordered their foreign ministers to prepare a working paper for further debate, the Saudi news agency said.

The Saudi report, monitored in Cairo and other Middle East capitals, quoted Saudi Crown Prince Fahd as saying, "We hope this paper would be constructive and useful."

Prince Fahd said a broad Arab summit would soon be held in Cairo, and the six-power meeting was only part of the larger one, the news agency said. The crown prince said the six leaders discussed mainly the Lebanese conflict and indicated the Saudis are anxious to get the Lebanese crisis settled before going on to a general summit.

The news agency reported that prior to the closed meeting Assad and Sadat, who have long feuded over Egypt's agreement with Israel on disengagement in the Sinai, shook hands and posed for photographers. It did not say whether the two had resolved their differences, but quoted Prince Fahd as saying, "A genuine spirit of Arab solidarity prevailed throughout the meeting."

Spacemen hit lake in snowy dark

Moscow (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts who aborted their flight because of equipment failure splashed down in a frigid Central Asian lake in the Soviet Union's first landing of a spacecraft on water, Moscow television reported Sunday.

Soyuz 23 Cmdr. Vyacheslav Zudov, 34, and flight engineer Valery Rozhdestvensky, 37, both first-time cosmonauts, were reported in good condition after their landing Saturday night, almost exactly 48 hours from the time they were shot into space.

But an account Sunday night by Vladimir Shatalov, a two-time cosmonaut himself and now a space official, indicated the landing was difficult and required "courage, heroism and will."

The flight of Soyuz 23 was cut short Friday night, following the launching Thursday night, when a failure in the spacecraft control system made a linkup with the Salyut 5 orbiting space laboratory impossible. The cosmonauts were to do scientific work aboard the space lab, probably over a period of weeks.

"The flight was a difficult, complicated one," Shatalov said on Moscow television. "At the beginning, all went as planned in the program."

Shatalov said the cosmonauts easily moved their spacecraft near the Salyut 5 for the rendezvous, but when the space ship's automatic approach system for linkup went into operation, "certain faults appeared, faults that did not permit the carrying out of the further process of automatic approach."

"The crew checked these faults, reported to earth, carried out a series of important observations that made clear the causes of the improper functioning of the automatic approach system and the crew was given the command to prepare for a landing."

Tass said the parachute landing occurred in a snowstorm on Lake Tengiz, 121 miles southwest of the city of Tselinograd in Kazakhstan.

"We must say that until this time, all Soyuz craft had come down on land," Shatalov said on television. "This is the first time a craft has fallen onto the surface of a lake. In these conditions the crew showed the same courage and will at the end of the flight (as they had earlier)."

There was no indication whether a water landing was intended.

Stover workers accept union pact

About 250 employees of the Russell Stover Candies plant in Lincoln voted unanimously Sunday to accept a union contract, which has been under negotiation since the union local began to be organized at the plant two years ago.

The new contract calls for a wage and benefit package worth $1.06 over the next 2½ years, including an 85-cent an hour actual wage increase, said Eugene Perry, union representative. It also includes a pension fund, an extra paid holiday and increased health coverage.

New contracts are also expected to be signed at the company's plants in Denver, Colo., and Marion, S.C., Perry said.

The agreement came in the wake of a nation-wide boycott of Russell Stover products, which began last March. The boycott was supported by the AFL-CIO and other major unions.

At no time since the Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union began to represent Lincoln Stover workers has there been a strike or work stoppage. This was the first successful attempt to unionize the plant.

Officers of the new local 393 of the union will be elected at a later meeting. Sunday the workers voted to name the negotiating committee as temporary officers to draw up by-laws.

On the by-laws committee are: Audrey Flury, Colleen McClary, Henry Clapper, Martha Gesch, Robert Wittstruck, and Juan Garza.

Tom Ford hit the campaign trail for the President.

Public accepts flu shots again

Associated Press

Health officials say they note more public acceptance of the swine flu vaccine program after a sharp drop following the reports of 35 deaths among persons who received the shots.

Meanwhile, nearly all of the clinics giving out the shots were to be back in operation Monday.

The officials said the number of persons receiving swine flu vaccinations began to increase late last week after a sharp decline following the reports of the deaths.

Federal health officials say the vaccine had nothing to do with the deaths. Nine states canceled their inoculation programs after the deaths in Pennsylvania of three elderly persons who had received the vaccine. All of the states later announced the resumption of the program and almost all of the public health centers involved were to resume the shots Monday.

In Pennsylvania's Allegheny County where the first deaths were reported, more than 17,000 persons received swine flu shots on Sunday as clinics reopened for the first time since three people died there.

Sunday's immunization project was aimed at persons between 18 and 64. Clinics serving elderly and infirm persons, including the one where last week's victims got their shots, reopen on Monday.

"The clinics today were successful. People turned out in force," said Allegheny County Health Director Dr. Frank Clack.

On Friday, the Center for Disease Control reported that the vaccine was not responsible for the deaths of 35 mostly elderly people who died after receiving the shots.

"It is clear to us that there is no basis to conclude that there is any increased mortality because of the flu shot program," said Dr. J. Donald Millar of the CDC.

In Pennsylvania, health officials reported a sharp decline in the number of persons getting the shots shortly after the death reports, but by the end of the week the rate was rising.

Officials in some states, including Wyoming, Kansas, Montana and Maryland, said the inoculation program ran on schedule last week.

Millar said more than 2.5 million persons were vaccinated by Wednesday of last week.

Some state health officials said they were concerned that publicity following the deaths might frighten people into avoiding inoculation.

"We will be giving shots in our program full force this week and we will see whether the fear exhibited by our elderly citizens has dissipated," said Dr. Nicholas Fiumara, director of communicable diseases for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. Fiumara said the number of elderly people receiving the vaccine dropped last week.

Shanghai posters show Mao's widow hanged in effigy

HONG KONG (AP) — Foreign officials coming out of China said Sunday they saw wall posters in Shanghai depicting the hanging in effigy of Mao Tse-tung's widow and one of the demonstrations that have been reported in several Chinese cities since Mao's death.

Prime Minister Michael Somare of Papua New Guinea, the first foreign government chief to visit China since Mao died Sept. 9, also said at a news conference that Premier Hua Kuo-feng told him he had been chosen to succeed Mao as chairman of the Chinese Communist party.

Members of Somare's delegation said that along with the posters of Chiang Ching, Mao's 62-year-old widow, were pictures of three other top Chinese radical leaders with crossmarks painted over them.

The posters were understood to be signs of disapproval rather than an indication of the fate of the four in the power struggle sweeping China.

Somare and his party arrived in Hong Kong on their way home in the wake of unofficial reports that the four radicals had been arrested. Crowds reportedly demonstrated against the arrested radical leaders in Shanghai, regarded as the center of the radical support, and other Chinese cities.

Hua's election to the top post of party chairman was first reported in wall posters in Peking on Oct. 9 and later confirmed to foreign reporters by a Chinese government spokesman. However, the government has never made an official announcement of the choice of Hua to head the party.

Peking has given no explanation for delaying announcement on the appointment. But there has been speculation it was being held up to permit Hua to consolidate his position following a reported coup attempt and assassination plot by party radicals led by Chiang Ching.

Somare said that on his arrival in China on Oct. 11 Hua "informed me of his election and I congratulated him as chairman of China."

Somare said the 57-year-old Hua gave no indication at their meeting whether he would relinquish his post as premier, which he has held since the ouster of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping in April. Teng, a protégé of the late Premier Chou En-lai, had been considered the front runner for the premiership but his appointment was opposed by Chiang Ching and her supporters.

There has been speculation that Chinese Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien, a financial expert who was given unexpected prominence during Somare's visit, may be named eventually to the premiership.

Somare said he heard nothing about the arrests of Chiang Ching and her fellow radicals in Peking but that he saw a demonstration and hundreds of wall posters in Shanghai on Friday. A member of Somare's delegation said he asked his interpreter for an explanation of the posters and was told only, "I am embarrassed."

He said the interpreter also asked him not to take pictures of the demonstration or wall posters.

The three-crossed out figures shown with Chiang Ching reportedly represented party Vice Chairman Wang Hung-wen, 38, Vice Premier Chang Chun-chiao, 55, and Politburo member Yao Wen-yuan, 51. They were reported to have been the chief co-plotters of the widow.

Meanwhile, China's official Hsinhua news agency said the Chinese army's Peking garrison has pledged to "strive to make new contributions in safeguarding the party Central Committee."

It said the soldiers also vowed that, under the committee "headed by comrade Hua Kuo-feng," they would "unite as one and march in step to win new victories."

The agency, monitored in Tokyo, repeated a phrase used many times in the past week, apparently in reference to the reported coup attempt of Chiang Ching.

It said the soldiers "pledge to fight resolutely against anyone who betrays Marxism-Leninism-Mao Tse-tung thought and tampers with Chairman Mao's directives, and anyone who practices revisionism and splitsm and engages in conspiracies."

These 4 candidates don't expect to win

WASHINGTON (AP) — "We think that being right is more important than winning," American Party presidential candidate Tom Anderson commented on Sunday.

There were no predictions of victory Nov. 2 in a broadcast appearance by four candidates from parties other than the Republicans and Democrats.

Joining Anderson on the special edition of NBC's "Meet the Press" were Peter Camejo of the Socialist Workers Party, Lyndon LaRouche of the American Labor Party and Roger MacBride of the Libertarian Party.

Joining Anderson of the special edition of NBC's "Meet the Press" were Peter Camejo of the Socialist Workers Party, Lyndon LaRouche of the U.S. Labor Party and Roger MacBride of the Libertarian Party.

He suggested a plan allowing parents to send their children to independent schools on a voucher system if they are unhappy with the public system.

MacBride said he is against forced retirement and added that a party plank seeking to eliminate all personal and corporation taxes could not be put into effect immediately.

"We recognize that taxation is inherently wrong," he said. But he added that a sudden unwinding of government could cause considerable suffering, which his party does not want.

Private charity, MacBride said, could handle welfare and giving to such charity would increase with elimination of taxes.

On politics, Anderson said he is for killing the Republican Party, which he said has falsely pretended to be conservative. He said the GOP has shown a death wish by rejecting Ronald Reagan for president.

LaRouche was asked if it were true that his party has used violence against opponents and he responded that his party members had been attacked by Communists and others.

Camejo denied that his proposal to increase taxes on corporations will increase consumer prices. He said the most inflationary items in the economy are defense spending and interest on stocks and bonds, and he would eliminate these costs.

He also attacked the death penalty, and said Carter signed a bill as governor of Georgia reestablishing capital punishment there. And Camejo called for bilingual education.

He said that the Cuban revolution was an "enormous step forward," although he doesn't support all of the government changes there.

LaRouche predicted that an economic crisis will confront the nation before the end of January.

Asked how he would implement his platform proposal to end deficit spending, Anderson said he would seek a drastic reduction in the size, scope and power of the government.

"Defense is virtually the only thing that I would not be for cutting," Anderson said, adding that he feels the federal government should have nothing to do with welfare or education.

Also seeking elimination of federal programs was MacBride who charged that liberals have tried to use the power of government to regulate economic life while conservatives seek to regulate personal life.

All four will be on the ballot in at least 18 states next month. Three other candidates making at least that many ballot appearances — independent Eugene McCarthy, Lester Maddox of the American Independent Party and Gus Hall of the Communist Party — rejected invitations to appear on the show.

Polled as to who they expect will win the presidential election, Anderson picked President Ford, while LaRouche said no one can tell and MacBride suggested that the contest could be thrown into the House of Representatives if he or McCarthy won a few states.

"I know who is going to win, the corporations, they win every time," Camejo said, adding that whether Ford or Democrat Jimmy Carter is elected "the American people are going to lose."

LaRouche launched an attack on Carter, charging that he is supported by advisers who are committed to thermonuclear war. He said that the nation is currently facing a monetary collapse and predicted that if Carter is elected there will be a war before summer.

He added that Ford formerly opposed the war policy, but now seems to be changing his mind. Ford is "weak but well-meaning" LaRouche said.

Camejo said the United States doesn't have a defense budget, but a war budget, and he wants to eliminate this.

For defense the United States should have only a popular militia which elects its leaders, Camejo said. He said that the current military structure exists to protect the corporations and because it is profitable to build weapons.

MacBride said traditional policy has been for the United States to abstain from foreign wars and that this changed only in the last 60 years. He said his party would seek to maintain American security, but without participating in the affairs of other nations.

"The barriers should be torn down and the country opened up to trade and travel, MacBride said.

Detroit News says Senate candidate's affair on tape

Detroit (UPI) — The Detroit News reported Sunday that Rep. Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., had an affair with a staff worker in 1969 during which their intimate conversations, including his dreams of the presidency, were taped with mutual consent.

The copyrighted story from the News' Washington bureau said Riegle, a Flint, Mich., congressman now running for the Senate, approved of the recordings by a woman identified only as "Dorothy." He later tried and failed to gain possession of the tapes, the News said.

The story attributed nothing illegal to Riegle or his friend.

The News said the tapes have been played in select Washington social circles and might be included in an upcoming book on Washington scandals. The newspaper did not indicate where it got the tapes and several letters.

Riegle divorced his first wife, Nancy, in 1971 and married another staff member, Meredith Ann White, three months later. By that time, the News said, the affair with "Dorothy" was over.

Riegle, a former Republican, is now running against Republican Rep. Marvin Esch in a tight race for the seat of retiring Democratic Sen. Philip A. Hart. The News said that when it contacted Riegle he did not deny having the affair and knowing of the recordings.

Esch and other Republicans have made an issue of Riegle's personal life, calling him unstable and overly ambitious.

Without quoting the woman directly, the News said "Dorothy" and Riegle met in 1968 at a Republican gathering while Riegle was still a member of the GOP. At the time he was 30 and she was 21. Later, the News said, he added her to his Washington staff as an unpaid worker.

The News said the woman started making the tapes while bedridden with a blood clot in her leg so she could replay them as if rereading a letter. The newspaper said Riegle never objected to the recordings.

Riegle accused the newspaper of "the most vicious and distorted campaign directed at anybody in politics that I've witnessed."

After publication of the article Riegle told UPI he stood by what he told the News and would not comment further.

"My personal life in the distant past is my personal life," he told the News. "The Detroit News ought to be ashamed of itself for its tactics and its behavior."

The News extensively quoted the taped conversations as well as letters covering personal matters between "Dorothy" and "Prince," Riegle's code name during the affair.

Among the News quotes was a passage in which Riegle discussed his plans to become president in 1980. The conversation started with Riegle mentioning a newspaper article to "Dorothy" concerning the 1976 presidential campaign.

"I doubt we'll make it by '76," Riegle reportedly said. "I think '80 will be our year."

According to the News, Riegle wrote a letter to "Dorothy" while he was on a flight to San Francisco and said at that moment he felt qualified to lead the nation.

"My mind and senses are razor sharp at the moment," the letter said. "If I'm ever president and a moment of supreme national crisis arrives, I hope to be as deadily pragmatic and aware as I am this second."

Industrial pollution fight said going well in general

(c) New York Times

When public clamor for environmental reform reached a crescendo a half dozen years ago, smoking factories became a symbol of air pollution, and industry's horrific discharge pipes became a conspicuous culprit in water pollution. Industry, along with automobiles and municipal sewage, was a prime target of ensuing legislation, notably the Clean Air Act of 1970 and the Water Pollution Control Act of 1972.

Industry's role in pollution has been underscored anew by a succession of recent events: General Electric's agreement to pay $3 million indemnity for its contamination of the Hudson River with PCBs, the imposition of a $13 million fine on Allied Chemical for poisoning a Virginia river with the pesticide Kepone, and last week's announcement of U.S. Steel's agreement to spend $155 million to muzzle the notorious stacks of its Clairton, Pa., coke plant.

These diverse but kindred developments raised some obvious questions about industrial pollution abatement. How much pollution is industry responsible for? How sedulously is abatement being pursued and how fast is it progressing? And how much is it costing?

The short answer, according to federal officials, is that industry has been responsible for a great deal of pollution, that, with some exceptions, its corrective work has been progressing well, and that costs have not in general been inordinate or painful. Of about 200 million tons of regulated pollutants going into the air annually as of 1974, more than one-third, in terms of sheer weight, came from industry, including power plants. In terms of noxiousness, industry is responsible for most of the pollution. Half of that 200 million-ton total is carbon monoxide, colorless, odorless and dangerous only in high densities; it comes from automobiles. But industry was the source of nearly all the particulates and sulfur-oxides and half of the oxides of nitrogen, along with 15% of the hydrocarbons.

A standard measure of water pollution is two categories of chemicals, suspended solids and oxygen-consuming substances. By far the biggest producers of these are "non-specific sources," such as land runoff. But in terms of specific sources, industry's share of suspended solids almost matches community sewage, and its input of oxygen-absorbing substances is about 30 times that of community sewage.

The Clean Air Act of 1970 said that industrial air pollution, along with automobile smog, should be abated by mid-1975 to the point where the whole country would have air meeting federal health standards. The United States is still considerably short of that goal. But the Environmental Protection Agency reported in May that of 20, 000 major stationary sources of air pollution (most of which are industrial), 82% were in compliance with emission limits or were on stipulated cleanup schedules.

The story is similar on water pollution. The 1972 law set two deadlines: mid-1977 for a partial cleanup ("best practicable" treatment of fluid wastes before discharge into waterways) and 1983 for near-total cleanup ("best available" treatment). The agency reported a few days ago that 91% of the 4,655 major industrial dischargers would be in compliance with their discharge limits by the mid-1977 deadline. The cleanup has by no means been easy.

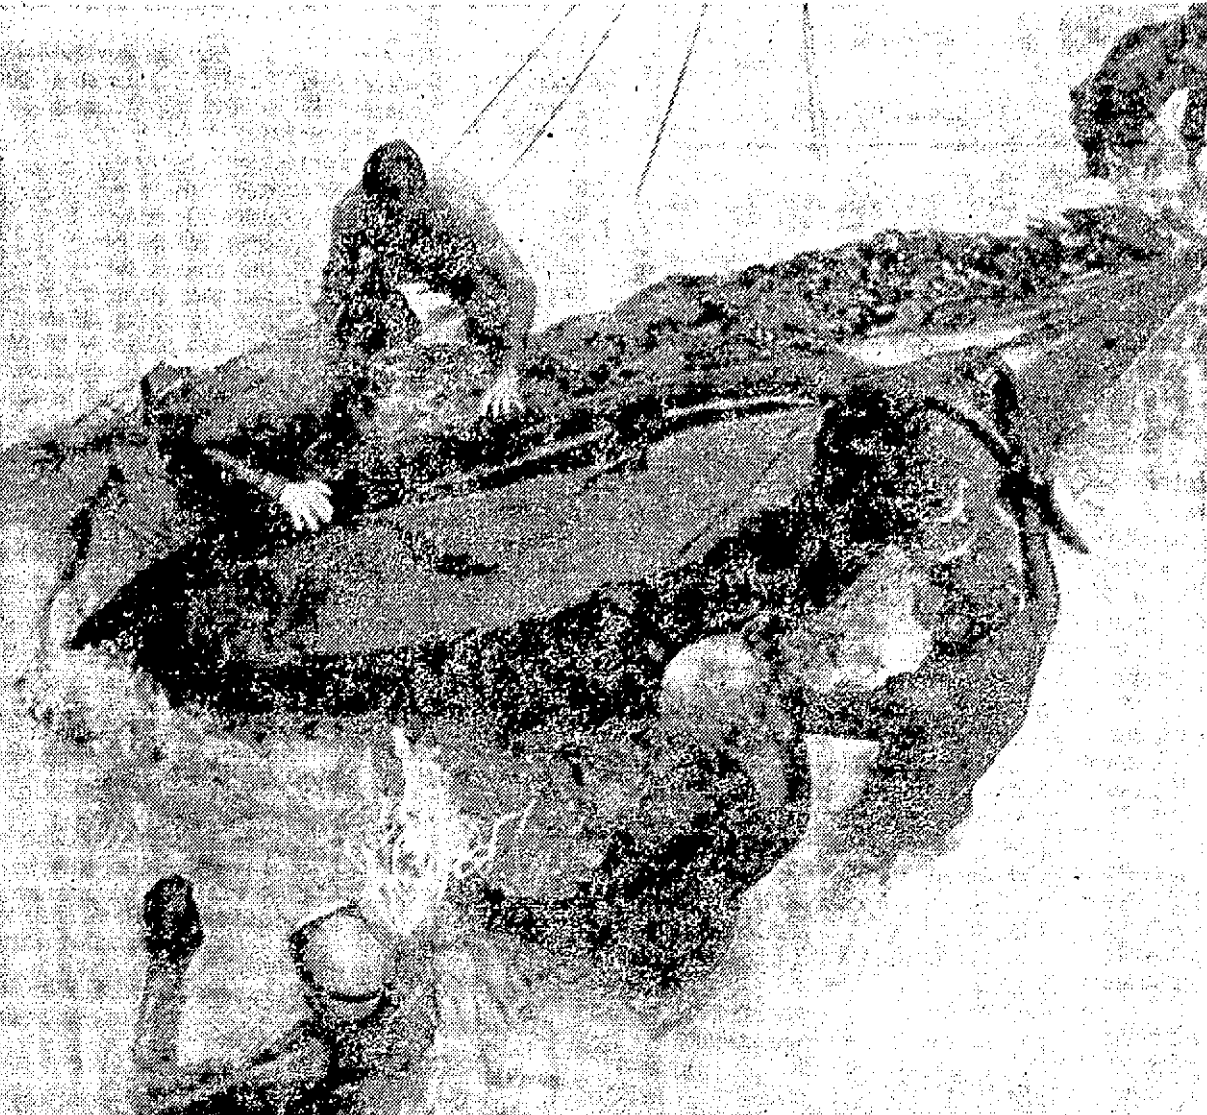

Up to last January the EPA, principally responsible for pollution abatement, had to initiate nearly 13,000 legal enforcement actions in the fields of air and water pollution and pesticides, resulting in nearly $10 million in fines and penalties. Much litigation is pending.

Industry says it has been spending $6 billion a year on new pollution control facilities, approximately 5% of its total outlays for new facilities. But that collective ratio obscures the fact that for some industries, the burden has been much heavier. According to the Commerce Department, the nonferrous metals industry's outlay last year reached 24% of its capital expenditures; the paper industry's 16.8%, and in the steel industry's blast-furnace plants, 13.5%.

However, the predictions of economic catastrophe that accompanied the enactment of the pollution laws have remained conspicuously unrealized. Since 1970, the EPA has tallied only 81 plant closings attributable to pollution requirements, involving 17,600 jobs. Conversely, the Council on Environmental Quality estimates that pollution control is providing more than one million jobs.

Sometimes industrialists see tactical or economic advantages in bucking pollution abatement. U.S. Steel has battled the government about cleaning up its facilities in a half dozen localities, and was recently singled out by John R. Quarles Jr., deputy director of the EPA, as having "compiled a record of environmental recalcitrance second to none."

While the agency's efforts to develop solutions to environmental problems are starting to pay off, there is still a long way to go. The National Academy of Sciences has calculated, for instance, that the statutory 1983 water quality objectives will allow industry to discharge annually only 300 million pounds of oxygen-absorbing wastes and 4.2 billion pounds of suspended solids. As of 1973, the latest available data period, the academy recently reported, actual industry discharges were exceeding those goals 14-fold and 30-fold, respectively.

Killer whale gets fitted with corset for trip.

Ramu's one whale of a problem

London (AP) — Ramu, a performing whale with a waistline problem, was fitted into a tailor-made corset Sunday and took off on a 12-hour flight home to California.

Ramu was just growing too fast, said Ronald Smart, director of Windsor Safari Park, where the four-ton killer whale has cavorted six of his 10 years in a 70-foot display pool.

"He was only 13 feet long six years ago and now his waistline alone is nearly that," said Smart. "He is almost 20 feet long and is growing nearly two feet a year. He simply needs a much bigger and deeper pool than we have."

He'll get one at Sea World in San Diego, which swapped the Safari Park a smaller pilot whale and three trained dolphins for Ramu.

Despite the ferocious name of his breed, Smart said, "Ramu is very good natured and we are very sorry to lose him."

Ramu's first inkling that it wasn't going to be just another Sunday of jumping and ball-playing with his dolphin companions came when seven divers joined him in the water at Windsor, 20 miles west of London.

They drained the pool, slipped the corset's fin holes over his flippers and rubbed him down with ointment. A 25-ton crane hoisted him, barking in bewilderment, into a truck for the ride to Heathrow Airport. There a firetruck tanked up the 500-gallon containers needed to keep Ramu moist aboard a chartered DC8 jet.

"We reckon he will be out of the water only about 18 hours," said consultant veterinarian David Taylor. "That's nothing, really. I have known whales to survive out of water for days."

"After all they are mammals, and they breathe air. The only worry is that their skin might dry out or that their own weight might harm them — eventually they would get sores."

Reynolds in hospital heart unit

Los Angeles (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds is under observation in the cardiac care unit of Cedars-Sinai Medical Center after complaining of chest pains.

A hospital spokesman said the 40-year-old movie star spent a "comfortable night" following his hospitalization late Saturday. He was taken to the hospital at about 9 p.m. after complaining of the pains.

The spokesman said Reynolds' physician said he would be discharged "in a day or so," and indicated it does not appear Reynolds has any serious medical problems.

Whisky vat blaze burns 24 hours

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Nine whisky vats exploded at a distillery and set off a 24-hour fire that consumed more than 500,000 gallons of cane whisky and was visible for up to 15 miles, witnesses said Sunday. Several persons were reported injured.

The fire began Friday at the Niori distillery in the town of Dobrada in Sao Paulo state.

Factory workers and local fire fighters were unable to extinguish the blaze until a company airplane arrived with extinguishers from Sao Paulo.

A spokesman for the distillery said 3.7 million gallons of whisky was stored in vats at the distillery, which produces 17,000 gallons of the powerful national drink daily.

Distillery employes emptied part of several whisky vats during the blaze to prevent them from exploding.

The cause of the explosion was unknown.

Laundromat forced to serve blacks also

Kaufman, Tex. (UPI) — Frank Radeke has operated a segregated laundromat in this northeast Texas town since 1960. But Sunday he said pressure from the news media caused him to open his doors to blacks.

Radeke, 66, owns the City Coin Laundry. Although there are two laundromats in town, the city's 1,100 black residents had access to only one.

Earlier this month a television news crew from a Dallas station filmed Radeke's refusal to allow six black women to use his laundry.

Last week he told a Dallas newspaper reporter he would not allow blacks to use the facility, then refused to answer any more questions and closed the door of the back room of his laundry on the arm of the newsman.

The FBI has since viewed the newfilm and sources said an investigation was begun into possible violation of civil rights laws.

"I would venture to say I operated the only coin-operated laundry in the United States that was still segregated," Radeke said. "I'm not bragging about the thing, you see. But since this publicity, I made the firm decision a week ago that I was going to open the doors. I'm not going to offer any more resistance. I just figure let nature take its course and let 'em come on in."

"Well, they have not come in and I still don't have their business."

Radeke admitted he had not advertised the fact or told anyone besides UPI. He was asked why he had prohibited blacks from using his laundry previously.

"Whenever any of the schools located in this country have integrated, they have experienced white flight. My idea was that if I integrated I would have white flight. I didn't think I could avoid it. And since I didn't think I was breaking the federal law, I did it."

"Why, I had so many customers tell me, 'As long as you keep this laundry segregated, I'm with you. When you integrate this thing, I'm going to look for a washing machine.' A lot of my customers just simply resent washing their clothes behind a black family."

"Besides," he said, "Kaufman has a very good black laundry. Quality-wise it's a top notch laundry. It's got brand new Speed Queens and its dryers are much younger than my dryers."

Grace Taylor, a customer of Radeke's laundromat, said the owner once refused to accept laundry from a community home for the elderly.

"Once when I was working at the old folks home — they take black and whites — our laundry went out and he wouldn't even let us wash those sheets over here," she said. "Why, I had to wash with the colored people in colored town."

580-foot-long cargo ship lost in Bermuda Triangle

New York (AP) — An oil slick, a fire-scorched life ring and an overturned life boat were the only traces Sunday of a 580-foot Panamanian cargo ship that disappeared with a crew of 37 in the so-called Bermuda Triangle.

The Coast Guard said Sunday the items were spotted by searchers about 180 miles west of Bermuda near where the missing Panamanian cargo ship carrier "Sylvia L. Ossa" sent its last known radio message Wednesday.

The life boat and other debris were tentatively identified as having come from the "Sylvia L. Ossa," the Coast Guard said late Sunday.

The 580-foot, 15,000-ton ship sent a radio message Wednesday to its owner — the Omnium Shipping Corp. of New York City — reporting it was behind schedule because heavy weather and gale force winds were forcing it to reduce speed.

The vessel was scheduled to arrive in Philadelphia last Friday with a cargo of iron ore from Brazil. The search was launched when the owners notified the Coast Guard that the ship failed to arrive in Philadelphia on schedule.

There was no record of the "Sylvia L. Ossa" having sent a distress message or a Mayday signal.

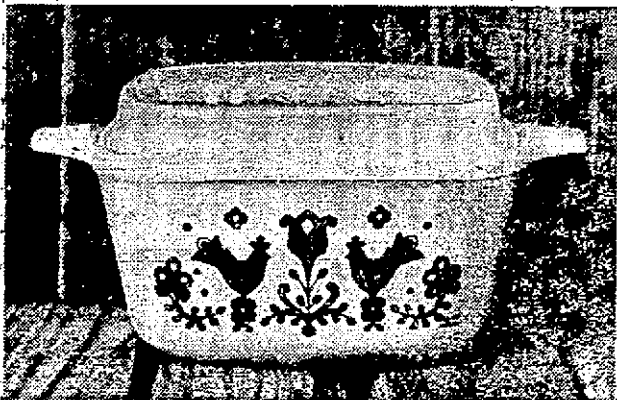

Other ships in the area have been notified to report any sightings of the missing ship, but the Coast Guard was not optimistic.

"It's not easy to miss a 580-foot-long ship on a day with visibility of more than 40 miles and calm seas, so it doesn't seem too hopeful that it's still adrift," a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The Bermuda Triangle is a legendary stretch of Atlantic Ocean — extending from Bermuda to Puerto Rico to Norfolk, Va. — in which untold numbers of vessels and airplanes are reported to have disappeared without explanation.

UN-L, UN-O not equal

Gov. J. James Exon, as well as others, have an important point to make in the matter of proposed parity funding for the University of Nebraska at Omaha. University management has proposed a $1 million special appropriation for UN-O to put it on an equal footing with University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

The governor's position is that UN-O and UN-L are not the same thing.

"The people of Nebraska cannot afford to finance two full-scale, separate universities," Exon said. He drew the distinction that exists between the two when he said that UN-L "is a full-time, full-scale, Ph.D. granting university, which is obviously going to cost more."

Oddly enough, the Board of Regents and President Durwood Varner would not really argue with the governor. None of them is proposing that we duplicate at UN-O what we have at UN-L.

Their problem is that the so-called parity approach has led people to believe that separate and equal institutions is what has been proposed. The mistake was in ever going for a parity appropriation in the first place.

The university central administration would have been far better off had it simply sought the $1 million in parity money through standard budgeting procedures.

Peddling disaster

Last week diplomats said that a meeting will be held soon in which fourteen nations, east and west, will discuss proposals to check the spread of nuclear weapons and ideas about the control of nuclear technology in nations who have been given facilities for ostensibly peaceful development by the nuclear powers.

The issue of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons has become an issue in the current presidential campaign, and rightly so.

That the announcement of a conference to discuss the problem should come just before the election is not a coincidence. Nevertheless, it is a problem of such urgency that a politically-motivated session or politically-motivated proposals are welcome.

In the past five to ten years the military nuclear capability of nations has picked up at an alarming rate. And during the past eight years the American government has almost been wholesaling nuclear technology — much of it to dangerous areas of the world.

Admittedly, that is hindsight but it represents, also, the kind of foresight that might well have been expected at the university's management level.

As we understand the parity movement, it means that the quality of education at UN-O ought to be on a par with that of UN-L, not that the two institutions should be the same in all regards. It doesn't mean that UN-O has everything UN-L has, but that what UN-O does have is as good as its counterpart at UN-L.

That kind of parity makes good sense and we doubt there would be a whole lot of argument with it. Again, that is what we understand the regents and university president to be proposing but it is not the concept as understood by others.

This whole controversy stems in the first place from the unfortunate distrust that exists between Lincoln and Omaha interests. We admit to some of that mistrust ourselves but we wish it were otherwise.

But how do you solve that problem? Which city is about to admit it has been wrong in its attitude and take a different approach?

The university cannot solve that problem, nor is it expected to, but it can and should do away with any parity approach and achieve its ends through less volatile means.

Our record in arming world belligerents with conventional weapons is no better — worse, in fact.

The United States is the premier weapons merchandiser in the world, which may be good business in the short-run, but which is courting global conflagration and disaster over the long range.

The argument that if we don't supply arms to every nation which asks, the Soviets will, is appealing but at the same time stupid. All it benefits are the arms manufacturers, at times at the expense of our own military capability, and in the end the foolhardiness of the policy could be tragically proved to an even greater extent than the proof now exists.

Jimmy Carter is right on the mark in talking about the disgraceful U.S. record with regard to the proliferation of nuclear technology and weapons in recent years. If he is elected, there is at least a glimmer of hope he may do something about it. It remains to be seen whether President Ford is really serious or not.

A laudable project

Omaha, Neb. It is obvious from your Oct. 2 editorial entitled "Making Health Care Sense" that you have not read the application which Nebraska Methodist Hospital and Childrens Memorial Hospital have submitted to various health planning agencies concerning their joint building project.

Improperly criticizing in public something which you have not examined in any depth is, in my mind, wrong, wrong, wrong! Where are your journalistic ideals for accuracy?

The project proposed by the two hospitals does not add a single general hospital bed to the Omaha area's total. Childrens Memorial Hospital will transfer 100 beds from their 44th and Dewey St. location to the site of Methodist Hospital at 8303 Dodge St.

Nebraska Methodist Hospital will transfer 180 beds licensed at its Eugene C. Eppley Complex to the 8303 Dodge St. site. The beds at the Eugene C. Eppley Complex will be re-licensed at some level of rehabilitation care — beds which Blue Cross-Blue Shield has said are needed in this area.

Childrens Memorial Hospital has the highest level of usage of any pediatrics facility in Omaha.

Nebraska Methodist Hospital has the highest level of usage — over 90% since 1970 — of any general hospital in Omaha. Methodist, in fact, has had to defer the admission of as many as 1,100 patients in a single year for lack of space.

The project which the two hospitals have proposed will give patients in both facilities access to specialized services without duplicating these services in the community.

Nebraska Methodist Hospital's newborns will have immediate access to Childrens Memorial Hospital's special care nursery. Childrens Memorial Hospital's patients will have access to Methodist's open heart surgery facilities, cardiac catheterization lab, cancer therapy unit and total body scanner.

As a result of careful planning on the part of both hospitals' boards of trustees, the hospitals will not increase charges to patients to cover the cost of construction.

It seems that a project which provides quality health care to patients, avoids duplication of expensive services and equipment, expands the range of services for patients, does not increase the licensed number of general hospital beds in the community and does not increase costs to the patient is a project which is right, right, right!

Threshing

Lincoln, Neb. Threshing was a great thing when they used the old machine drawn by horses. There were two men, one on each side, cutting the twine on the sheaves of grain. Each had a knife and they must be quick as the sheaves came in fast to the great mouth of the thresher, separating the wheat from the straw. One man was on the stack to keep straw for bedding in the barn for horses and cows. It was valuable. A far cry from the days when they used a flail and pounded the grain from the chaff.

Now they have the great combine that does it all in one operation.

You take the grain to the elevator and store it for so many days and then sell. You say I'll take so-and-so. You take what they give. Then you go to the store and say I'll give you so much for flour. You pay the price they ask, big deal or raw deal.

The best and the worst

By James Reston

WASHINGTON — When Jerry Ford played center for Michigan, Fielding Yost, his famous football coach, had a trick play called Old 83. It was a fake fumble, designed to make the opposing ends slice for the ball and open up the flanks to a long run along the sidelines.

Jerry obviously mastered the fumble but not the fake. For even after all these years, his political tricks are so obvious that even his denials of the obvious truth almost sound reasonable.

Not so long ago, he was rejecting political pressure for financial aid to New York City, rejecting pressure to boost farm price supports, refusing and even denouncing pressure from Israel and its supporters in this country for new sophisticated military weapons he didn't think were required by the balance of power in the Middle East.

But lately the balance of political power in the presidential campaign has been going against him, so he has changed his mind. Before campaigning in New York, it was announced that Israel is to get the concussion bombs and heat-sensitive equipment for spotting targets in the night; before campaigning in the Great Plains, he announced that wheat price supports will be increased by 50 per cent, and the farmers who produce corn and other grains will also get larger supports than they had before Ford felt he needed more political support himself.

He is responding, of course, to Gov. Carter's own excessive political promises to Israel, the cities, and the farmers, but in the process they are both destroying the myth that they were something different in American politics — the nice, decent open Republican candidate versus the new, moralistic Democratic candidate, who would never mislead the American people.

The truth is that they are both playing old-fashioned power politics, but there are some important differences. Carter has been on the firing line with the press for over 20 months, giving more interviews, answering more questions, and in the process probably making more mistakes than Ford.

Meanwhile, the President has been avoiding the hard questions. When he was running against Reagan in the primaries, he ran to the right; when Carter challenged him on the cities, the farms, and Israel, he ran to the left and promised what he had refused on principle before.

When the President was in trouble, he was not "open" but avoided press conferences for months. When he thought he had to talk on a limited point, he saw a few reporters in the Oval Of-ice, but barred the television cameras.

CARTER TAKES A HARD RIGHT TO THE MOUTH
— BOTH MEN ARE HURTING —"

When he learned that the special prosecutor had finally decided that he hadn't fiddled with his income tax, he called an evening televised press conference in the White House to dramatize his innocence, and destroy his opponent.

They are both playing what Frank Kent of the Baltimore Sun used to call in the day of our innocence, "The Great Game of Politics," but it is a dangerous game, and certainly not very "great."

The sad thing about it is that, after Vietnam and Watergate, we thought for a while that Ford and Carter might shoot the credibility gap and preside over a more factual campaign on the issues of the future.

Instead, they have loitered down into an increasingly trivial and even nasty personal argument over secondary issues, and contributed to the cynicism, particularly among the young, about the whole American political process.

Even so, there are still a couple of weeks to go before the voting. Since the nominating conventions, neither Ford nor Carter has made a single noble or even memorable speech about the problems of the next four years, which is what this election is all about.

In fact, they have not even been faithful to themselves, let alone to the future of the nation.

Lately, they have been showing us their worst rather than their best qualities, and trying to win on tricks and tactics, which is too bad, for, despite their blunders, they both have much more to offer the nation than they have shown so far.

Senate race a toss-up

On Target

Hruska and Carl Curtis had indicated that the voters were more tired of them than anxious for Democratic representation.

The fresh "new" (statewide, that is) candidacy of Second District Congressman John McCollister was supposed to erase any voter discontent over Nebraska's incumbent senators and launch a new Republican Senate dynasty.

But Ed Zorinsky may destroy those plans — although you'd be safer as a betting man in assuming that the Senate contest is even than to believe that a Democratic victory is imminent. I think I'll risk not a dollar on either guy.

It's probably safe to say that Zorinsky is going to win Omaha big, that McCollister is going to win the traditionally Republican Third District and that the balance of power this time may lie in the First District. That's Lincoln and most of eastern Nebraska.

A lot of changes could occur in the next two weeks, but it looks like this one is going into sudden death.

If you plan to stay up election night to watch the count, you will probably see Zorinsky ahead at midnight. If he isn't, it's over.

Most of the Omaha vote (if not all of it) will be in by then, and Zorinsky will need a healthy lead to hold up against the early morning outside count which should favor McCollister.

You may not know the winner until you get up on Wednesday — if then.

And if Zorinsky does win, what does that do to Governor Exon's Senate prospects in 1978?

Exon has made no decision on a Senate race in two years (I think), but the early guess is that he will go for it.

Would Nebraskans, traditionally Republican in contests for national office, be willing to send two Democrats to the Senate? If they're both fiscally conservative, perhaps. But it would take a dramatic change of voting habits.

Clearly, if Zorinsky does win next month, that victory would change the face of Nebraska politics. But the new features might be masked for awhile before we can look into the future.

Stay tuned.

Election undecided

Tom Wicker

national survey by Mervin Field of Field Opinion Research, who rated Carter ahead in only 23 states with 223 electoral votes.

Field believes 13 states — including such majors as California, New York, Illinois and Ohio — with 224 electoral votes remained undecided in late September.

This situation unquestionably reflects slippage in Carter's position from the heady days just after the Democratic convention when he had a wide lead in all polls. To some considerable extent, however, this slippage may be more apparent than real, and today's polls more nearly reflect what has been the fundamental situation all along — a majority

New York — Despite the late Jim Farley's pre-television dictum that voters in a presidential campaign have their minds made up by Labor Day, the strong impression left by two weeks of travel in major electoral states from coast to coast is that the 1976 election is still to be won in the time remaining.

That conclusion is bolstered by the latest Gallup Poll, showing Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter leading President Ford by 50 to 42 — which, considering a four-point margin for error and the number of voters undecided, suggests a close race indeed, with an edge still to Carter. It comforts well with a New York Times state-by-state survey, which shows Carter leading in 26 states with 294 electoral votes, but not so certainly as to have the election clinched.

And it is influenced by another party challenger in a difficult battle against the advantages of an incumbent President.

The misleading polls of July and August were taken at a time when Carter had no opponent at all — when his potential opponent might well have been Ronald Reagan and when Ford was less "the President" than a candidate scrounging for delegates.

But Gerald Ford is now unquestionably "the President." The omnipresence of modern communications, through which Carter rose from obscurity, has stripped him of his mystery, raised questions about his potential, and made his face and voice as familiar as any other politician's.

So Carter has been slipping, all right, but to what extent the slippage has been, in effect, a correction of unrealistic expectations is not clear.

Ford's gain cuts margin of Carter lead to 4 points

By Louis Harris

Although Jimmy Carter won the second debate by a thumping 54-30% margin, President Ford continues to gain this election and now has narrowed the presidential race to a mere four-point Carter lead, 44-40%, with third-party candidate Eugene McCarthy receiving 6%. After the first debate, Carter held a much more substantial 48-39% lead.

Thus, the Carter lead of two weeks ago has now been cut almost in half. In a two-way pairing, a parallel trend has developed, with Carter's previous 50-41% lead now dropping to 47-42%. A nine-point Carter margin has dropped to a five-point edge.

The latest survey of 1,503 voters, taken jointly by the Harris organization and ABC News, contains within it evidence that this race between President Ford and Gov. Carter is now likely to narrow even further in the final two weeks, with much depending on what each candidate does and says. For, make no mistake about it, this election is up for grabs.

The key clue in this latest survey that presages a close election is the issue of trust. When voters are asked which candidate they trust more, President Ford forges into a razor-thin 39-38% lead. After the first debate in late September, Carter ran ahead on the pivotal trust issue by 39-37%. Although these changes are marginal, they are indicative of the momentum going Ford's way.

Of course, another factor that indicates just how much the outcome of the election will be determined in the remaining two weeks is the revealing evidence that solid backing for both men is slipping rather than increasing as Election Day approaches. In late August, only 35% of the voters who favored Carter said that they felt "very strongly" for their man. In September, the intense Carter support shot up to 46%. But as of last week, the number of those backing Carter who feel strongly about him has dropped to 37%, a fall-off of nine points after the second debate.

Similarly, in late August, no more than 31% of Ford voters said that they felt "very strongly" for their candidate. In September, after the first debate, this number went up to 40%. In the latest survey, after the second debate, intense Ford support dropped back to 38%.

This means that more than six in 10 voters who say they would vote for either Ford or Carter simply do not hold very strong feelings for their candidate. Put another way, it is conceivable that a sizable number of Ford or Carter voters can be weaned away by the other candidate by Election Day — or that they will simply stay at home from the polls.

Of course, if there is a low turnout on Election Day, the chances that President Ford will close today's gap become even greater. For, in this latest Harris Survey, for the first time, Ford has moved into substantial leads among those groups that are most likely to vote. With Eugene McCarthy in the race, the results indicate. President Ford is ahead among the college-educated by a substantial 48-33%, among the $15,000-and-over income group by 47-35%, among the professional people by 45-35%, and among small businessmen and executives by 54-30%.

All of these segments of the electorate are far more likely to come out to vote, even in a low turnout, than those that give Carter his current lead. For example, Carter's biggest edge can be found among those with a grade school education, where he is ahead by 59-31%; among the under-$10,000 income group, where he leads by 53-31%; and among skilled labor, where he is ahead by 50-33%, and blacks, where he leads by 77-14%.

When the electorate's feelings on the crucial issue of trust are compared with their actual vote preference, some indications of Carter vulnerability emerge more clearly. In the suburbs, Ford holds a current 44-36% lead in the vote, but a bigger 43-32% margin on the trust question. Among young people under 30, Carter is ahead by a sizable 49-34% in the vote, but by no more than 43-34% on the trust issue. Among women, Carter holds a 44-39% margin in the vote, but loses the trust test by a narrow 39-38%. Among those voters who say they are "certain to vote," Carter holds a vote advantage of 45-41%, but loses the preference on trust by 40-38%.

If the election finally hinges upon which man the voters trust, Gerald Ford might very well pull this election out in the end. If it were to depend upon the issue of "time for a change," then the odds would favor the Democrat, Jimmy Carter. The final two weeks will tell the story.

Home is old mail, dull politics

San Francisco — What's new in the blooming world? Arrived home from Mexico to find the mail is as high as an elephant's eye. About half of it is something too late to do anything about.

Deep six into the waste basket. Happy, happy day!

"This is a crazy campaign," said the man with the martini on Alimony Row. "The whole show is about sex: What does Carter think about sex? What does Mr. Ford think about sex and her daughter?"

He said: "Not that I've got something against sex, understand. But how about jobs? And inflation? And now they're going to tax on higher Social Security taxes."

Not to change the subject but I ran into a good sex item from Stockholm by wire dispatch: "A Greek worker, age 25, has been fined a respectable sum in Swedish crowns for kissing a 20-year-old Swedish girl for 10 minutes."

"The passionate Greek — (as the newspaper called him) — wanted to continue the kidds of duration. The Swede, suffocating, managed to push him away. Ran to the nearest police station while the Greek pursued with pursed lips."

The Great Debates were debated, but mostly in the morning after newspapers. Man, that was dull material going nowhere.

Thank heavens it's football time again.

"Take a little exercise," said the doctor. "We lead a sedentary life."

Well, the sedentary life is the life for me, mates. Flaked out before the Big Tube. Watching the football marvels of Sweet U — a million dollars worth of former All-State linemen.

We don't climb those never-ending stairs to Row Z, seats in the squeezing middle. "Parn me, ma'am. I didn't mean to fall in your lap."

Who says I lead a sedentary life? (As soon as I check in at the airline counter, they move the airplane from Gate 1 to Gate 52.)

"Sweet U is two inches from the goal line! The score is tied up! It's a key play, folks!"

From the kitchen our 14-year-old daughter cried: "Can you come here for a minute? It's an emergency!"

I said: "Hold all emergencies. What is it?"

She said: "The dishwasher's overflowing! I can't get it stopped!"

I went out and turned off the water.

The announcer was still talking: "Well, now you've seen it three times on instant replay! What a play folks! In 30 years of watching football games —"

I guess I can read about it in the papers.

Smith stand on Rhodesia set

London (UPI) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith said Sunday there can be no question of whites surrendering control of security forces during the proposed two-year term of the Rhodesian interim government.

In an article under his signature in the Sunday Express, Smith set out his negotiating stand for the Geneva Conference due to assemble later this week.

"Law and order must, and will be maintained in Rhodesia, and our security forces will continue to destroy the terrorists wherever they are found," he said.

"There can be no question of white Rhodesians giving up control of the security forces during the term of an interim government."

Smith said the West must accept the continued presence of whites in Rhodesia as "an essential stabilizing ingredient" in the country in the light of the global struggle with communism.

He said the West must ensure "it does not respond to the escalating demands and backtracking which have become apparent" since he accepted the transition to black majority rule.

"If the West gives in to the African extremists and it becomes impossible for the white Rhodesians to stay in their own country, the West will merely obtain a piece of real estate already mortgaged to Russia: and the 'squatter rights' will not last very long either.

"The consequences are evident — bloodshed, poverty, desolation and chaos. The example of Angola is before our eyes. The victory of the Communists would be assured," Smith said.

Israeli major sentenced in Arab's death

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli major has been sentenced to two years in prison and demoted to private in connection with the beating death of an Arab Communist leader on the occupied West Bank last April, military sources said Sunday.

It was the first reported conviction of an Israeli soldier stemming from the Israeli action against West Bank rioters. Eleven Arabs died in clashes with Israeli troops during the spring protests against Israeli control of the area.

The officer, who was not named, reportedly told his men to "take good care" of Ahmed Dahdoul and six other prisoners arrested during a riot at Salit, north of Jerusalem. The soldier interpreted this as an order to beat them. Dahdoul, 45, died from the beating, the sources said.

Relieves Tormenting Rectal Pain And Itch, Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues

... Due to inflammation. Gives prompt, temporary relief from such burning itch and pain in many cases.

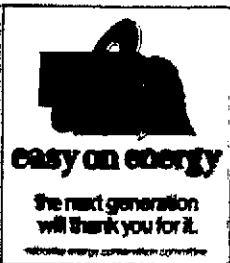

The burning itch and pain caused by infection and inflammation in hemorrhoidal tissues can cause much suffering. But there is an exclusive formulation that in many cases gives prompt relief for hours from this itch and pain so that the sufferer is more comfortable again. It also actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation and infection.

Tests by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C. and at a Midwest Medical Center reported similar successful results in many cases. This is the same indication you can buy at any drug counter under the name Preparation H®.

Preparation H also lubricates to protect the inflamed surface area and it doesn't sting or smart. In fact, it has very soothing qualities which make it especially helpful during the night when itching becomes more intense.

There's no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

Nebraska-built systems to irrigate Libyan desert

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Thirty Nebraska-built Lockwood irrigation systems will soon be making large green circles in the Libyan desert, according to officials of the Gering-based company.

Lockwood has perfected a new method of fusing steel linings to irrigation pipes to withstand carbonic acid in the water which destroyed English and French-built systems in less than three years.

Lockwood also has built a unique monster machine that can construct an entire pivot system to cover 220 acres in less than a single day in the desert country.

"The sand they have is peculiar in that it is as hard as a road when dry but once it has been farmed it is unbelievable stuff. If you drop a wrench in it, the tool will simply disappear," said Myron Tremain, Lockwood advertising executive.

"We designed a machine that could build a system in less than a day because the crops would be lost if we had to remove the existing system and replace it with our new system over a week or so," he added.

The year-round growing season demands constant watering because of the intense heat and lack of rain. Primary crops are alfalfa, small grains and forage sorghums.

"They use the center parts of the system for alfalfa and grow wheat, barley and other grains on the outside of the circle by shutting down the outer end of the system and dropping it off. Wheat needs less water than alfalfa," he said.

The system produces a crop of alfalfa every 28 days for use in feeding sheep and other livestock.

The Kufra Oasis has a water supply as deep as 2,000 feet below the surface, but the water rises to the 200 foot level once a well is drilled. Experts indicate that there is enough water to operate the area for 800 years at present pumping rates.

Much of the money for the systems came from the sale of oil. The Libyan government is trying to convert to a food production capability by modernizing their agricultural operations.

The 171-foot monster that builds the systems is a huge bridge-like affair with a big power unit at each end.

"They load the whole system on it, start at the middle and build it as they go out to the end. Its special wheels don't sink into the sand. It has power units for electricity and air tools and cranes on each end," Tremain said.

"I don't think they will be using this technique in the United States. It is too hard to move and we don't have the need to replace an existing system in a single day. It was the only answer in Libya however," he said.

Tremain said he didn't know what the unit cost to build. "We used a lot of local materials and bought only the power units," he explained.

This is the second time Lockwood has shipped a large order of center pivot systems to Libya. "We had a team of people who taught them how to operate and maintain the pivots. We are sending along a second team this time but they expect to return to the U.S. sooner than the other team did because the Libyans now have a lot of people familiar with our equipment," Tremain said.

In addition to the team of 17 technicians which should have its job completed by Christmas, Lockwood will keep three men providing maintenance for two years in Libya.

A company engineer is also planning to stay for a year to work on design changes to meet the challenges of irrigation farming in the desert.

'The monster' built in Gering will facilitate assembly of pivot irrigators at Kufra Oasis.

Stray dogs become 'domestic coyotes'

Silver City, N.M. (AP) — Like the weather-beaten cowboys of the early West who are his forebears, James Thrubert keeps a watchful eye on his herd as it grazes in the southwest New Mexico foothills.

Turner carries a high-powered rifle, but he isn't much worried about rustlers, wolves or even coyotes.

The big threat to his 500 head of cattle are "domestic coyotes" — family pets and stray mutts that turn over trash cans and chase cars in town, and form packs of vicious calf-killers outside the city.

"You can always spot a domestic coyote; he's the varmint wearing a collar with city tags on it," Turner said.

Turner said his calves are easy prey for the dogs on his 14,000-acre spread near Silver City.

He recently came on a pack of dogs attacking a 6-month-old calf. Turner said he scared the dogs off, but had to shoot the mangled calf a day later.

Turner said domestic coyotes are tougher foes than other predators.

"You can't cyanide them...that's illegal," he said. "Traps don't work because they won't take the bait — they're not hungry. These damn dogs are killing just for the fun of it."

Turner said most city dwellers refuse to believe their dogs are involved — even when they have proof.

On one occasion he recognized an attacking dog and went to the owner's home. Turner said the dog's head was smeared with blood of a dying calf, but the owner still shrugged in disbelief.

"They always say, 'Well, my dog wouldn't do that.'"

"The .30-.30 is the cure," Turner said, glancing at his rifle. "I don't care if it's somebody's poodle or not, if I see it on my land I'm going to destroy it."

Weekly Grain Report

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

The long-awaited turn-around in grain prices finally surfaced with a little help from a new crop report. The report indicated a reduction in crop prospects and a lot of help from improved loan rates under the federal crop price support program.

eased. Other credit aids are being offered some prospective overseas grain customers.

The new price floors will shore up worldwide grain prices as well as our own, stiffening the resolve for better prices by farmers in all parts of the globe.

The importance of the new loan rates can be measured by the floor price which was increased by an estimated $40 million for the 1976-77 crop years.

It will even help stabilize the meat industry by settling the price of feed to a considerable extent. Livestock producers will now have a more stable grain market in which to purchase their most expensive inputs.

Soybeans still have an excellent prospect of reaching much better prices. Japanese buyers are expressing concern over a possible embargo because of anticipated soybean demand.

Wheat will benefit the most from the increase in loan rates as it is the only grain selling below the new rates, but the improvement will aid all feed grain crops.

The prospect is for some further improvement once the harvest is over and the buying and selling patterns of grains are firmed up for the non-crop season.

Poland will certainly be back in the market for grain now that its credit problems have been

Hoadley named county agent for extension's horticulture

Dr. Brent Hoadley, currently District V (Southeast Nebraska) extension specialist in horticulture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, will become Lancaster County agent in horticulture, starting Jan. 1, 1977.

The announcement came from Dr. Loyd L. Young, District V extension director, and Art Wiechers, Lancaster County extension board chairman.

The position was created by the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Service because of the increased interest in horticulture. According to Hoadley, "this is a program much like a county agent's, but it is a special area. If horticulture is as popular as we think it is, I'll have a lot of questions submitted to me."

Post-Watergate air deals blow to political silly season

By Edward Howard
Associated Press

The post-Watergate political atmosphere may have dealt a severe blow to what has long been to many observers the best part of any political year: The silly season.

The silly season used to come at about this time every election year.

If the candidates were addressing the issues, usually swearing they did, while contending their opponents did not, they had expressed their positions about 100 times each weekly.

If they were not espousing the issues, they had probably run out of gibberish to battle the electorate with.

Thus faced with the need to say something "new" or "different," they embarked unwittingly upon the silly season.

Sometimes the result would be a George Romney, saying he had been "brainwashed." Time will tell if President Ford's off-the-cuff analysis of Soviet influence in Eastern Europe falls into that category; ditto with Jimmy Carter's analysis of lustful thinking.

Maybe the politicians are still funny,

but no one notices.

What America needs since there apparently is no hope for a good, cheap cigar is another Will Rogers. Sometimes the folks back in his day didn't know how funny politics could be, until they viewed it through the cowboy philosopher's perspective.

The silly season may have been replaced, it seems, by the "morality message."

When politicians need something besides an issue, the new trend is toward a morality message. This comes in the form on spouting about their own morality, or their opponents' alleged lack of same.

The morality message may serve the same purpose as the silly season: it fills the time, pads the speech or helps the headline.

The problem is that it just isn't entertaining. It gets boring.

This is not to say that morality should not be an issue in politics.

The problem is that the posturing and pontificating gets a little silly, itself.

The difference is, it isn't funny.

Hruska praises local control of education

LaVista (UPI) — U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska Sunday urged continued local control over the nation's educational system, contending "it is the key to the future of America."

Hruska noted the federal government at present supports only about 7% of the total cost of elementary and secondary education.

"Even this much federal assistance, however, has led to the establishment of layers of rules and regulations," Hruska said, "and to the imposition of administrative burdens at the local level which are unrelated to the development of programs of quality education."

As a result, Hruska said, the test for qualification of federal funds has become not whether the children are helped, but whether the state or community meets the rules.

Hruska commented in remarks prepared for the dedication of the LaVista Junior High School.

Hruska said local control encourages experimentation and flexibility which have served to keep the nation's school systems "vital and relevant."

"In every field — from the arts to the sciences — we have seen Americans make their mark in history," Hruska said.

"I believe this is a result of our attitude toward education which rejects the sterile atmosphere of uniformity and embraces the concept of diversity."

"Although the federal government helps to assure that children and communities with special needs receive an equal educational opportunity," Hruska said, "There is a danger when this same centralized government begins meddling too much in the educational affairs of the states and localities."

Only 1 wanted to run

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha Marine Corps Reserve called off a "mini-marathon" Saturday when only one contestant showed up.

Capt. Charles L. Dinsmore said he guessed the 25-degree weather scared off people. A new date for the race will be announced later.

Bar to have new home

The Town Tavern will be opened by Dec. 1 at a new location — across the street at the former Sam Lawrence Hotel at 11th & P.

According to Don Dibbern, tavern owner, the Sam Lawrence first floor is being remodeled to accommodate the tavern. An application for transfer of the license site has already been approved.

The rest of the former hotel which closed several months ago has been sealed off and will not be used.

Housing authority awards two building contracts

The Lincoln Housing Authority has awarded a $247,000 contract to Larson Construction Co. and a $435,000 contract to Cook Construction Co.

The Larson contract is for building 10 homes in the Clinton neighborhood. The three-bedroom homes are to be sold or leased with preference given to sale.

The Cook contract is for a new office complex for the authority at 57th and R Streets. The Housing Authorities offices are now at 225 N. Cotner Bldg.

Sentence given 3 Omaha youths in beatings

Omaha (AP) — Three youths implicated in the ax-handle beatings of two Omaha men last June have been sentenced to the Nebraska Penal Complex.

William J. McCardle, 17, and Wesley V. Brayman, 18, both of Omaha; and Anthony D. Sackett, 16, of Carter Lake, Iowa, were sentenced.

Morehouse and Brayman each pleaded guilty to felonious assault. Sackett pleaded no contest to felonious assault.

David T. Morehouse, 21, told police the car he was driving was halted by a truck before he and a passenger, Scott A. Rosencrantz, 19, were attacked and beaten with ax handles.

UNICEF 'Honeybee' to fly

Omaha — A UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) "Honeybee" will make a pre-Halloween flight through Nebraska to distribute collection kits for the annual Halloween drive, according to Melvin Beckman of Omaha, the Nebraska coordinator for UNICEF.

The "Honeybee," a small foreign car of that name, will begin its flights in Omaha at the Center for the Pursuit of Peace, 1715 Izard St., Oct. 26 and visit some 50 Nebraska communities.

Schools, churches and civic organizations will be contacted for support of the program which provides help for children in more than 100 countries.

Gateway bus to make more stops

The Gateway Special bus service between downtown and the Gateway Shopping Center soon will be making more stops on O Street.

Jim Donaghy, director of the Lincoln Transportation System, said the buses, which operate between 9:45 a.m. and 6 p.m., will stop at all major intersections controlled by traffic lights plus some others. He said the extra stops will be added in the next few weeks.

City of 28 persons has million visitors

Silver Dollar City, Mo. (UPI) — This amusement park city, which actually has a post office and ZIP code, boasts a permanent population of 28 and more than 1 million visitors a year.

It is located south of Springfield and is devoted to preservation of the 1870s way of life.

Nebraska birth rate drops since 1970

Associated Press
Since 1970 births per thousand total population have been below any previously recorded, both in Nebraska and the nation.
In 1973 and 1974, Nebraska births per thousand population dropped below 15.0, compared to rates above 17.0 at the beginning of the 1970s and rates as high as 24.9 during the "baby boom" years of the 1950s.
Even during the depression years of the 1930s, birth rates for Nebraska were estimated to have remained well above 16.0.
As reported in the October issue of "Business in Nebraska," birth rates per thousand in the nation have been slightly higher than those of Nebraska since the mid-1960s. U.S. figures have shown a similar trend of dramatic decline since 1970, with the 1975 rate dropping below Nebraska's.
Other fertility measures estimated by the bureau confirm the downturn.

The general fertility rate (GFR) or number of births per thousand women aged 15-44, has shown much greater declines than have total births because of the increasing number of females entering childbearing ages.
The GFR at the national level was 87.1 in 1970 and declined to 66.7 by 1975, while for Nebraska the decline was from 87.1 to 71.5.
Births per thousand females in a five year age group showed a decline of 28.6 per cent for females in the peak childbearing ages of 20-24, from 1970-1975.
Births to females aged 25-29 declined 18.8 per cent in the same period, even though the share of total births accounted for by this age group has been rising as women in their early 20s have postponed beginning families.

Postponement of the birth of the first child appears to be the most pronounced, causing an increase of two years in the age of the mother most likely to bear her first child, from age 19 in 1970, to age 21 in 1975.
Postponement of births probably has been accompanied by a reduction in average completed family size, and in particular by a reduction in the proportion of fourth and higher order births, although completed fertility levels for females currently postponing childbearing cannot be known for several years.
General fertility rates in 1970 showed wide variation among counties within Nebraska, ranging from rates of over 100.0 in the northeast corner of the state to rates below 60.0 in other counties.
The state's metropolitan areas, Douglas, Sarpy, Lancaster and Dakota Counties, have experienced rapid declines in births since 1970, compared to a slight decline in nonmetropolitan births.

The estimated increase in Nebraska's metropolitan female population has been more than twice that of the non-metropolitan areas so that the decline in metropolitan births per thousand childbearing females has been even more dramatic, 26.3 per cent from 1970 to 1975, compared to a nonmetropolitan decline of 8.7 per cent.
Demographers are not in agreement concerning whether low current fertility rates will continue, or whether they are only temporary.
However, if lower fertility rates persist the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Bureau of Business Research says the consequences for the state's future population may include slower growth, fewer young persons, and an increasing proportion of aged persons.

Oregonian held in abduction of children

Omaha (AP) — An escapee from an Oregon state mental hospital was held Sunday in connection with the alleged abduction and assault of two children in northwest Omaha, police said Sunday.
The Douglas County attorney's office is studying the incident to determine if charges will be filed against Gary D. Caughey, 35, of Salem, Ore.
Police said Caughey was serving a 15- to 20-year sentence in Oregon for the rape of a 17-year-old girl.
Caughey was arrested Saturday night near a northwest Omaha golf course after being caught by Roland Steibel, the father of the two children involved in the incident. The children were not seriously injured.
Police said Caughey's car would not start when he allegedly tried to drive away with the children.
According to police, Marien Steibel, 8, and her brother, Erik, 6, were playing in the family car at the parking lot of a store Saturday night while their parents were shopping.

Argument gets man shot in head

Pawnee City (UPI) — An argument at the Pawnee City VFW Club Saturday night resulted in the shooting of one man and the arrest of another.
Dave Brown of Pawnee City was reported in stable condition at St. Elizabeth's Health Center Sunday following surgery for a gunshot wound to the head.
Pawnee County authorities were holding another Pawnee City man pending formal charges.
Authorities said the two men had a fight in the club after which one of them left. He later returned and he and Brown went to the man's home. While there, Brown was shot in the head with a .25 caliber pistol.

Omaha mishap raises fatality toll

Omaha (AP) — Barbara Zangerle, 54, of Omaha died in a two-car crash west of Omaha in Douglas County Saturday night, officers said Sunday.
Investigators said she was driving one car when it was in collision with an auto driven by Christopher Robinson, 25, also of Omaha. The death raised the Nebraska highway fatality toll for the year to 308, compared with 306 a year ago.
In another weekend mishap, a rural Beaver City man, Robert J. Hutchens, was killed Friday in a two-truck accident, according to the State Patrol.
Mr. Hutchens, 50, was in collision with a pickup truck driven by Marvin Crawford, 23, of rural Watsonville.

'Cooperatives' is theme

McCook (AP) — "Cooperatives: People Working Together" is the theme for the 1976 national observance later this month of the McCook Federal Land Bank Association and Production Credit Association.
The McCook FLBA makes long-term real estate loans to farmers and ranchers while the South West Nebraska PCA makes short and intermediate term loans for production and operating expenses.
As cooperatives, both associations are owned and directed by their borrowers.

Swimsuits travel from beaches to glittering parties

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

Big Red fans' journeying to Hawaii for the football game Dec. 4 can travel light and still be well-dressed.

In fact, women may want to wear their swim suits everywhere... yes, everywhere from beach to a formal cocktail party, and possibly to the game itself.

Swim suit designers have turned the one-piece spandex suit into a basic piece of clothing from which to build an entire wardrobe.

For less than $80, you can buy a new "diaper look" spandex swimsuit and full-length skirt coverup which doubles as an evening dress.

And for less than $150 you can buy your entire swimsuit-based wardrobe for a winter vacation at a sunny beach. Many outfits are available in red for Cornhusker fans, according to a New York fashion merchandiser.

Sam Reffsin, in Lincoln representing several designer firms which cover the entire facet of women's clothing, said components or "put-togethers" are the important item in fashion today.

Sandra Kinsey's "diaper-look" swimsuit glides easily from beach to cocktails.

And with the right components, one can be dressed for the beach, for morning, noon and a formal evening, Reffsin says.

He says for less than $150, one may purchase an ensemble which includes swimsuit — the base for the entire outfit — a coverup top, a long skirt or full pants for a formal coverup, a street-length skirt, a tailored pair of pants and possibly an additional jacket-like top.

This type of outfit is ideal for traveling, says Reffsin, who advises vacationers to follow the old adage: take on a trip only half of what is originally packed and "you'll have more than you'll wear on any vacation."

"You don't have to spend a lot to look good," says the fashion expert who suggests planning a wardrobe as a chef plans meals.

American women like to look smart but not "different," and the dress business needs to recognize this and design clothing for the consumer.

According to Reffsin, it is not the economy which has affected the dress business — it's "lack of imagination and ingenuity."

"Designers are not in tune with the consumer — they are consumed within themselves," he said.

Often the designers are so consumed in what they like that they "are completely out of touch" with the needs of those for whom they are designing clothes, he believes.

Noting that the fantasy look is the newest look in evening wear for women, he said it is an exaggeration of fashion using light, airy fabrics and mixing prints and solids with florals in bouffant skirts and tops.

However, the popular fantasy look has had to be interpreted for American women, because American women cannot and will not accept the fantasy look of Europe, according to Reffsin.

The European fantasy-look is primarily geared to the jetsetters and "women will not wear those things," he says, noting that such designs result in retail racks lined with unsalable items.

Designers and buyers must consider the consumer and ask, "Will this sell?"

If a woman walks out of a store with nothing in her hand, there is something wrong, Reffsin says.

The fashion expert believes women go into a store looking for something and if they don't find it they go out empty-handed but will probably buy something somewhere else.

This is an important factor which retailers should consider in marketing their products. And women should not be forced to pour through crowded racks of clothes in various styles and colors looking for something they want.

Reffsin feels that cluttered racks discourage the buyer and don't show off individual clothing items in an effective way.

Consumers should be able to shop in stores where the sales personnel helps them select what is best for the individual consumer, Reffsin says.

Opening lead — nine of diamonds.

There is a play that has to be seen to be believed, and, after you've seen it, you may still not believe it!

As anyone can plainly see, West has an absolutely sure trump trick. He simply doesn't cover the Q-J of clubs when they're led. He just sits there and waits until his well-guarded king wins a trick.

Except that he never gets it! The king is dead (Long live the king!), and there's nothing

West can do about it. Call it magic, chicanery, or anything else; this is one sure trump trick that vanishes into thin air!

Actually, declarer plays the hand very simply. He wins the diamond lead and plays the Q-J of clubs, West following low. When East shows out, the slam appears hopeless, since South has a spade loser also. But declarer plays on, hoping for a miracle.

He cashes two more diamonds, then plays the A-K of hearts and ruffs a heart. He next plays the A-K and a low spade, won by East. By this time East has only two cards left — a heart and a diamond. South has the 10-9 of clubs. West the K-4 of clubs, and dummy the ace of clubs and nine of spades. Whatever East returns, South trumps with the nine and West's certain trump trick goes down the drain.

This writer suggests that you don't bother to learn this play — just file it away among your curiosities! I've never come across it at the bridge table, and don't ever expect to.

I sometimes run into people who tell me they've executed a smother play (that's what it's called), but I put them in the same category as those who tell me they once held 13 spades. You just can't believe everything you hear!

Underwear causes wife's dilemma

Dear Abby

By

Van Buren

Dear Abby: I've been married for four months, and my wife and I are having our first disagreement.

She insists that it's bad manners to clean up one's plate. She says when we are at someone's home or dining out, I look like I'm half-starved when I finish every morsel of food on my plate. She says I should always leave a little something.

I say it's foolish and wasteful to leave perfectly good food on a plate to be thrown out — especially at today's prices. Also, cleaning my plate is a habit of mine. Ever since I was a wee lad, my mother prodded me to clean my plate.

Please settle this.

CANADIAN
DEAR CANADIAN: Old-fashioned etiquette books suggested that we "leave a little." But new-fashioned common sense tells us to "waste not."

I'm not recommending that the last drop of gravy be sopped up with bread; just don't put any more on your plate than you can eat.

Dear Abby: I'm writing as one woman who has been in love with a married man to other women in the same boat. I suggest the following message to the man's wife:

Dear Wife: Your husband is going to leave you and marry me just as soon as:

- (a) you recover from your nervous breakdown, eye infection, hysterectomy.
- (b) you complete your vocational training, find a job, retire.
- (c) your kids are grown, out of high school, married and produce the first grandchild.
- (d) his parents are "gone."
- (e) He can't divorce his wife as long as his parents are living.
- (f) The dog has its pups.

Shop around for bargains in competitive toy market

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

If you're shopping for toys for Christmas, you may want to shop around to get the best price in the very competitive toy market.

A check by The Lincoln Star revealed considerable variation in prices with so-called discount stores — not necessarily offering a discount on all items.

One retailer said that the toy business is one of the most competitive businesses there is — even more so than the grocery business.

He said for this reason his store employees compare prices weekly to keep up with the competition, but that they don't mark down all items. "It's a big volume business but you don't necessarily make much money," he said.

A check on prices of the popular Six-Million Dollar Man and Bionic Woman dolls varied as much as three dollars from the lowest to the highest price.

For example, one department store is selling each for $6.98 while two discount stores are selling them for $7.97 and others have them priced at $8.77 and $8.97.

And the highest price was found at a department store which apparently discriminates between the dolls by selling the Six-Million Dollar Man for $10.99 while it offers the Bionic Woman for $9.99.

An extreme is in a small child's toy, the Happy Apple, which varies at stores from $3.33 to $4.49. In this instance, the lowest price was at a discount store.

One discount store which sells one doll at the same price as its discount store competitors, is selling another doll for a price higher than any of the discount stores or department stores at which the survey was made.

Another extreme was found in the new Family Tree House which is being offered for $11.84 at one department store and for $16.99 at another, while the discount stores carrying the toy are selling it for $11.97 and $12.97.

An older toy, the Lite Brite, could be purchased for as little as $6.97 at one discount store while it was selling for $11.29 and $11.99 at two department stores.

A check of one discount store revealed that it had lowered its prices from advertised prices a week earlier on most items to match prices of competitors. However, the price of one doll checked went up $2.96 from the advertised price.

The Star's study also revealed that one or several items cheaper at one store doesn't necessarily mean that everything is less than at the competitors' stores — in fact, isolated items may be considerably more.

Listed below are the price comparisons on random-picked items carried at most Lincoln stores:

	Department Store			Discount Store
	#1	#2	#3	#1	#2	#3	#4
Family Tree House	$11.84		$16.99	$11.97	$12.97

Bionic Woman	6.98		9.99	7.97	8.77	7.97	8.97
Rub-A-Dub Doll	11.77		15.99	10.97	10.97	10.97
New Baby Alive	11.77	11.47	16.99	11.47	10.97	11.47	13.77
Baby-That-Away	11.88	11.47	12.99	14.96	12.97	11.47

Santa's helpers turn out toy trains

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — Some 800 of Santa Claus' busiest helpers are hard at work in nearby Chesterfield Township turning out toy electric trains for the Christmas rush.

Lionel's train business reached a peak in the early 1950's but business declined and in 1968, the firm halted production.

A year later, General Mills acquired the Lionel name and tooling and began rebuilding its toy train empire.

William Hawfield, Jr., general manager of the General Mills Lionel Division, estimated division sales would top $15 million this year.

Lionel's train business reached a peak in the early 1950's but business declined and in 1968, the firm halted production.

A year later, General Mills acquired the Lionel name and tooling and began rebuilding its toy train empire.

Eight-year-old Shella Meyer of Crete gazes at an array of toys.

Careful selection enhances toys

Careful selection of toys is important! Not only from a price standpoint, but careful selection should include consideration for the child for whom the toy is purchased and other children in the household who may have access to the toy.

With the coming Christmas season, parents, grandparents and others are lured to those delightful newest creations in dolls, trains and toys displayed in toy departments or which appear on the pages of colorful Christmas catalogs.

And although many toys specify a particular age group, the individual child or children who may play with the toy should be considered.

Janet Flanagan Wurtz, educational representative for consumer affairs for the Penney's stores, told The Star that most toys are safe from a manufacturers' standpoint but care should be taken in selection and in supervision of those playing with the toy.

The adult role is very important, she said, stressing that any toy can become an unsafe plaything if it gets into the hands or mouth of too young a child.

She stresses not buying many toys with numerous pieces. Such toys not only create storage problems, but they may be a problem for young children who tend to put things in their mouths.

"Don't overwhelm a child with lots of toys," she said, noting that children enjoy toys more if a few are brought out at a time.

Particularly at Christmas time when children receive several toys, it is good to put some toys away either until the child is ready for a specific toy or until such time as he or she becomes tired of those with which he or she is playing.

But toys should be more than fun. They should provide learning experiences as well.

In response to the demand for additional guidance about specific areas in which types of toys help a child develop, the J.C. Penney's stores engaged a panel of human development and consumer experts to prepare a list of guidelines for choosing a toy and what to expect of a toy, according to Ms. Wurtz.

This panel states that a good toy should help the child grow physically, mentally, creatively, socially or in a combination of these areas.

For physical development, the toy should exercise the use of large and small muscles and develop motor skills and coordination.

A toy should strengthen the child's ability to solve problems and deal with language, numbers and other kinds of information.

It also should encourage the child to be imaginative and inventive in the context of play and give the child practice in interacting and communicating with people.

In choosing a toy, the panel offers the following check-list:

- A good toy should:
- Be one the child enjoys.
- Be safe.
- Be well-made and durable.

—Provide continuing interest so the child will return to it.

—Be usable in a variety of ways or for a variety of purposes.

—Do what it claims to do and what the child expects of it.

—Involve the child, not as a spectator, but in its actual use.

—Help to provide an understanding of the child's world.

—Challenge, but not frustrate.

—Contribute to the building of a positive self-image for the child.

Since children differ greatly in their development, their interest and their talents, it is important to note that unless a child genuinely enjoys a toy, its development characteristics might as well not exist, the panel states.

Listed below are suggestions by the panel on how to help a child get the most out of toys:

—Play briefly with the child to spark interest in a new toy or to rekindle interest in an older toy.

—Provide safety at play by setting rules and limits the child understands. "Check in" as often as you feel necessary.

—Recycle toys. Avoid overwhelming the child with too many at once. This leads to loss of interest in any toy. Giving a child a "vacation" from a toy creates renewed enthusiasm for it.

—Treat toys as a part of, rather than a substitute for, the gift of yourself.

Let's talk Insulation.

Did you know...

- 25,000 homes in Lincoln have substandard insulation?
- If these 25,000 homes were insulated properly, it would result in a 30% savings in energy required for heating and a 20% savings in energy required for summer cooling?
- Electricity saved from those 25,000 homes during one summer could run the city's street lights for one year?
- Adequate insulation can be written off in about three years from the savings realized in heating and air conditioning costs?

Those are the facts. Your Lincoln Electric System is vitally concerned with energy savings, and you are vitally interested in "shaving" your utility bills. Proper insulation is one way. There are many others. If you'd like to know more of these, drop in at your Lincoln Electric System's Business Office and ask for "Energy Conserving Hints".

Reds' Ken Griffey is safe as Chris Chambliss stretches to grab wide throw.

Reds reel in Catfish, 4-3

Cincinnati (UPI) — In bone-chilling 41-degree weather more suited for football than baseball, Cincinnati's Tony Perez wielded his hot bat Sunday night and put the New York Yankees into cold storage, possibly for the remainder of the World Series.

The 34-year-old Perez, the man they call "Doggie" because of his dogged determination in clutch situations, lined a single through the cold night air with two out in the ninth inning to score Ken Griffey with an unearned run and give the Reds a 4-3 victory over the Yankees in the second game of the Series.

The triumph gives the Reds a commanding two-game lead over the Yankees, and they need only two more victories in the best-of-seven Series to become the first National League team since the 1921-22 New York Giants to win back-to-back world championships. The third game will be played at Yankee Stadium Tuesday night with rookie Pat Zachry pitching for the Reds against Dock Ellis.

Perez, who had three hits in Saturday's 5-1 victory and had singled in his second time up against Hunter, got his chance to be a hero when a piece of Yankee strategy backfired in the ninth inning.

Stymied from the third inning on by ace right-hander Jim "Catfish" Hunter, the Reds got the break they were waiting for with two out in the ninth when shortstop Fred Stanley threw Griffey's slow rolling grounder past first base off the Reds' dugout for a two-base error.

Now came a pivotal decision by Yankees' Manager Billy Martin.

Do you pitch to Joe Morgan, the Reds' best hitter, or walk him intentionally and pitch to Perez?

The decision was to take a chance with Perez, and it proved fatal.

The Cuban-born first baseman lined Hunter's first pitch sharply to left field and Griffey, one of baseball's fastest runners, scored just ahead of Roy White's hurried throw to the plate.

"I just tried to make contact and get him in," said Perez. "I went up there looking for a fast ball and I got one. When I got to the plate it was warm for me. When I hit that ball I didn't feel anything in my hands."

Hunter had been brilliant from the third inning on, retiring 12 batters in a row from the third until the eighth innings and might have been a winner had the Yankees been able to deliver in the clutch.

It appeared the Reds would give Hunter a quick exit. They whacked him hard in the first two innings and scored three quick runs in the second to take a 3-0 lead.

Designated hitter Dan Driesen, who warms his bat in the clubhouse sauna between plate appearances, led off with a double off the left-center field wall and scored when George Foster, the major league RBI leader, singled to center.

The Yankees appeared to be out of trouble when catcher Thurman Munson threw out Foster trying to steal second, but Johnny Bench doubled to left-center and, after Cesar Geronimo walked, Dave Con-cepcion singled Bench home. Concepcion then stole second, and following a walk to Pete Rose, Griffey delivered Geronimo with a sacrifice fly.

But Hunter seemed to get the feel in his hands after the third inning and the Reds did very little with him until the ninth.

It was a different story for the Yankees, though. They had plenty of scoring opportunities against starter Fred Norman, but just as in Saturday's first game, they couldn't capitalize.

In the fourth inning the Yankees pushed across a run on singles by Munson, Chris Chambliss and Graig Nettles, but Norman got out of further trouble by striking out Elliott Maddox and getting Willie Randolph on a grounder.

The Yankees finally tied the score at 3-3 with a pair of runs in the seventh inning.

Billingham, who had not pitched in two weeks, retired the last eight men to face him and has now allowed only one run in his last 25 innings of World Series competition.

MU, Onofrio hoping for up week

By Mark Gordon
Star Sports Writer

Even Al Onofrio admits he's becoming weary of answering the same question — "How can Missouri's football team do so well one week and then so poorly the next?"

"I really, really do get tired of answering it. That's all I've been asked this season," said Missouri's football coach whose Tigers invade Lincoln Saturday for a nationally televised game against Nebraska's Cornhuskers.

"It's been frustrating at times. We've had some great victories and some disappointing losses," he said. "I think the type of schedule we have has something to do with it."

The Tigers have either been up or down. They have won games at Southern California and Ohio State — two of the toughest sites in the country. But they've also lost two games — home contests to unheralded Illinois and Saturday a 21-17 verdict to Iowa State.

So if past history is an accurate barometer, Saturday will be Missouri's "good week."

But does the Missouri staff consider Nebraska in the same class as USC and Ohio State?

"You know we do," Onofrio said. "We have to be, if we're going to win. Nebraska is one of the best teams in college football. They have a great offense and defense. We have to play our best to beat them — we know that."

Onofrio must decide between the recovering Steve Pisarkiewicz or Pete Woods, who guided Missouri to its stunning 22-21 victory over Ohio State, for the quarterback's spot.

Pisarkiewicz, sidelined four weeks because of an injured shoulder, returned to action against Iowa State and completed 13 of 29 passes for 212 yards and two touchdowns.

"Zark played well but not up to pre-season form. You have to remember he was out for four weeks. Everything considered, I think he did quite well."

Woods started and played for about a quarter and a half (completing one of six passes for 37 yards), Onofrio said. "It's nice to have two quarterbacks, but you can only play one at a time. I don't know yet who'll start against Nebraska. We'll see how practice goes this week."

Onofrio's capsule descriptions of Missouri's offensive backfield:

— Rich Danshill, a bruising 6-4, 225-pound sophomore fullback. "He made a great run when he went 56 yards for a touchdown (against Iowa State). He's been playing real good football."

— Curtis Brown, 5-11, 200-pound senior tailback, who rushed for 97 yards against Iowa State. "He's played well and does a real good job running. He's quite a good receiver with good speed."

Joe Stewart, a 5-11, 180-pound junior slotback, who caught six passes for a 171 yards against Iowa State including a 42-yard touchdown reception. "He's the fastest man of the Tigers with 4.4 speed. He's an excellent pass receiver and a good runner and blocker," Onofrio said.

Onofrio said injuries have caused numerous personnel adjustments with the Tiger defense.

"We've had to use a lot of different people. We're still not where we'd like to be. We've got more potential on defense but we haven't been able to do better since each week we have a different set of players," he said.

Although the Tigers were dejected on Sunday after the Cyclone loss, Onofrio said the thrill of performing on national television will spark the Tigers. But, remembering last year's nationally televised game at Columbia, Onofrio said the Tigers hope to be more alert this year.

"I think special plays (like the "Bumerooski" NU used for a touchdown last year against Missouri) when they're executed right can be very effective. Those are things you just don't know about. We have to be alert for everything. You just can't practice against everything a team may use."

Still, Onofrio has been pleased with the Nebraska series.

"We've beaten them a few times. For the past several years, we've had a real good rivalry and we usually play pretty good games. We're looking forward to another good game in Lincoln," he noted.

TIGER NOTES — Onofrio said he wasn't surprised with Nebraska's 51-0 smashing of Kansas State. "The Huskers won a lot bigger than we did (a 28-21 decision one week ago at Manhattan, Kan.). We fumbled a few, but KSU is always a lot of trouble at home". He said the Tigers suffered no serious injuries against Iowa State and he expects no one to miss the NU contest.

Hart passing propels St. Louis past Dallas

United Press International

Jim Hart is an important reason St. Louis has won the NFC Eastern Division the past two years. And Dallas, which failed to stop Hart Sunday, suffered its first loss of the season finding out just how good he can be.

Hart passed for 346 yards and three touchdowns, including scoring tosses of 54 and 17 yards to Mel Gray, to give the Cardinals a 21-17 win over Dallas.

Both teams are 5-1 and tied for first place in the NFC East race.

The final St. Louis drive began after the fired-up Cardinal defense stopped the Cowboys on a goal-line stand late in the third quarter.

Dallas had blocked a punt and took over on the eight, but St. Louis rookie defensive tackle Mike Dawson led the charge which stopped Charles Young short of the goal line on a fourth and one situation.

St. Louis took over and Hart passed 21 yards to Terry Metcalf, 23 yards to Gray, 16 yards to J.V. Cain and then threw 17 yards to Gray in the end zone for a 21-10 Cardinal lead. Cowboy safety Cliff Harris tipped the ball into the air and Gray snatched it for the touchdown.

Gray finished with seven receptions for 152 yards.

Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Drew Pearson with a little more than a minute left in the game, but the ensuing onside kick failed.

A final Dallas drive ended at the Cardinal 21 with an incomplete pass in the end zone as time ran out.

Hart hit on 22 of 32 passes, while Staubach completed 21 of 42 attempts for 250 yards. Staubach had been successful on 73.1 per cent of his throws coming into the game.

Metcalf scored on a four-yard pass as the Cardinals marched downfield with the second half kickoff to take the lead for the first time, 14-10.

Dallas led 10-7 at the intermission on a 35-yard field goal by Efren Herrera as Cowboy safety Randy Hughes and Harris ended two second-quarter Cardinal drives with interceptions.

In other games Pittsburgh upset Cincinnati 23-6, Baltimore beat Buffalo 31-13, Minnesota defeated the New York Giants 24-7, Washington beat Detroit 20-7, Cleveland edged Atlanta 20-17, Green Bay downed Philadelphia 28-13. Seattle outlasted Tampa Bay 13-10, Kansas City beat Miami in overtime 20-17, San Francisco blasted New Orleans 33-3, Los Angeles rallied to beat Chicago 20-12, San Diego surprised Houston 30-27 and Oakland defeated Denver 17-10.

The New York Jets visit New England Monday night.

Franco Harris had an NFL record 41 carries for 143 yards and two TDs to lead Pittsburgh to an upset of Cincinnati that tightened the AFC Central race. Harris, who broke former Penn State teammate Lydell Mitchell's record of 40 rushes, scored twice on one yard runs.

Mitchell pushed Baltimore ahead with a six yard run and Bert Jones added two short TD passes as the Colts spoiled Jim Ringo's coaching debut with Buffalo. Fran Tarkenton threw for two TDs, including a 41-yarder to Chuck Foreman, and became the NFL's first quarterback with 3,000 career completions as the Vikings beat the winless Giants.

Washington's defense came up with key interceptions by Pat Fischer and Joe Lavender and added five quarterback sacks to defeat Detroit.

Greg Pruitt rushed for 191 yards and two TDs to lead Cleveland over Atlanta, playing for the first time under new Head Coach Pat Pepler.

Lynn Dickey threw two long TD passes and Bartie Smith scored twice on short runs as Green Bay beat Philadelphia. The victory, the Packers' third straight, gave them a 3-3 record and marked the first time they have been at .500 since midway through the 1974 season.

Jim Zorn threw a 15-yard TD pass to Sam McCullum and John Leypoldt kicked two field goals as Seattle outlasted Tampa Bay in a duel of previously winless expansion clubs.

Jan Stenerud kicked a 34-yard field goal with 17 seconds left in a rainy overtime period to lift Kansas City to victory over Miami. The Dolphins have lost three straight for the first time since 1970.

Jim Plunkett ran his season touchdown total to 10 with scoring passes to Gene Washington and Wilbur Jackson to spark San Francisco over New Orleans.

Lawrence McCutcheon, whose third-period fumble set up Chicago's only touchdown, scored on an 18-yard run early in the fourth quarter to put Los Angeles ahead to stay. The Rams had squandered a 10-0 lead before rallying.

Dan Fouts drove San Diego 60 yards late in the fourth quarter and Rickey Young scored from one yard out in the Chargers' upset of Houston.

Ken Stabler connected on 16-of-20 passes, including a 46-yard TD pass to Cliff Branch, to lead Oakland over Denver.

Sports Signals

The injury myth

The injury factor in evaluating football games is vastly overrated, according to Mort Olshan in his book, Winning Theories of Sports Handicapping.

This was proved on at least two fronts Saturday and disproved at Kansas, where the Jayhawks had a letdown after losing quarterback Nolan Cromwell for the season with a knee injury.

In Nebraska's 51-0 victory over Kansas State, the Cornhuskers played without half of their starting backfield and one offensive lineman. Yet, there was no drop off in the Husker offense. Pittsburgh won handily over Miami despite going with a walk-on quarterback.

Earlier this year, Missouri was able to win over Ohio State, North Carolina and Kansas State despite going with No. 2 quarterback Pete Woods. Yet, the return of No. 1 State Pisarkiewicz didn't help as the Tigers lost to Iowa State last Saturday 21-17.

It should be noted that Missouri, in defeat, had a very productive afternoon in total offense. The Tigers rushed for 250 yards and passed for 269 yards for a total gain of 519 yards.

Kansas probably will go with Scott McMichael as Cromwell's replacement when the Jayhawks play Kansas State Saturday. KU will be Nebraska's opponent a week from Saturday in Lawrence, Kan.

Don't forget Nebraska's nationally televised conference battle with Missouri will begin at 2:20 p.m. Saturday in NU's Memorial Stadium — not 1:30 p.m. as is printed on the ticket. Also, the date of the Nebraska-Oklahoma game is Nov. 26 — not Nov. 20 as the ticket shows. It also will be nationally televised.

Cornhusker notes and quotes

Fullback Thor Jacobs and defensive tackle Dan Pensick joined the Husker varsity for the K-State game. Both are freshman recruits. Jacobs carried the ball twice for nine yards.

Quarterback Vince Ferragamo needs just nine yards in passing yardage to reach the 1,000-yard mark this season. He has completed 76 of 126 passes for 591 yards and 12 touchdowns. A year ago, his season total was 79 of 135 for 1,153 yards and 12 touchdowns. He's now third on NU's all-time list for yards gained and TD series, behind only Dave Haman and Jerry Tagge.

Because of Ferragamo's accuracy in passing, receivers Bobby Thomas, Dave Shamblin and Chuck Malito also are moving up on the all-time pass catching list.

Thomas now is 11th in passes caught with 47, eighth in receiving yards with 802 and tied for third by Guy Ingles for TD passes with 11. Shamblin is 11th in yards with 712 (on 39 catches and three TDs) and Malito is 12th with 627 (on 36 catches and six TDs).

Sophomore Richard Berns is Nebraska's leading ball carrier with 421 yards in 34 attempts, 183 yards more than Monte Anthony, who has rushed 74 times for 318 yards.

Ferragamo congratulated every member on the team following the K-State game. "I always like to do that because this is a team effort, not an individual thing," he said. "It's all part of the fun in sharing a victory."

Defensive tackle Ron Pruitt talked about the Husker pass rush: "We worked extra hard on the pass rush this week. Last week, we didn't quite get to the quarterback and kept ending up a step short, but we were back to par today."

So was tackle Mike Fultz. "Every time I got ready to do something today," Pruitt said. "Just before I'd get there, I'd find Fultz jumping on somebody."

Stallworth, Burke rush teams to victories

By Ken Hambleton
State College Writer

Byron Stallworth and Dave Burke, the top two rushers in the state, ran for two touchdowns each for a total of 489 yards in leading their teams to impressive wins Saturday.

Stallworth, the leading rusher with a 129.4 yards per game average, pounded out 265 yards in 47 carries to pace Nebraska Wesleyan to its first win over Doane in 10 years in a 26-13 Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game.

And Burke, a 6-2, 208-pound senior with an 84.7 yards per game average, ground out 224 yards in leading Kearney to a 36-9 win over previously unbeaten and 14th ranked (NCAA Div. I) Washburn in a Central States Conference game.

"I'm really not tired," said Stallworth, a 5-11, 173-pound junior following the game. "I went into the game so tense and tight it caused problems. I fumbled three times in the first half and at one time thought about asking coach to take the out. I knew Doane had the best defense in the state and I was worrying about that too." Doane was rated third in the nation in total defense.

"But at halftime I just stopped thinking about it and just started all over like the game hadn't even started," said Stallworth, who now has 912 total rushing yards for the season. He has gained over 119 yards in each of NWU's six games.

"I guess it was my best game, but I can't take any more credit than the offensive line," Stallworth said.

NWU offensive line coach Dennis Butler explained a change in plays in the second half led to the Plainsmen ground attack.

"Our kids felt at halftime that we could run straight at Doane," said Butler. "And we'd seen in the first half that the sweeps and isolation plays were taking too long to develop, and Doane was getting to us.

"We knew we could run and we figured we'd stay on the ground until we got stopped and then we'd go to passing," said Butler. "But we never needed to."

All-state offensive tackle Bob Parks, a 6-3, 228-pound NWU senior, said, "That had to be the best game our line has had," he said.

"It's a lot easier to block for a back like Stallworth, because you know he can pick the hole. We set the hole and he'll adjust it," Nebraska Wesleyan took the lead in the NIAC with a 2-0 record and 4-2 overall.

The NWU defense had a good game also, holding Doane to just three first downs in the second half and limiting Doane fullback Steve Schulz to 30 yards in the second half. Schulz finished the game with 138 yards rushing.

Kearney State coach Claire Boroff had been disappointed by his team's lack of consistency early in the year. But after Saturday's win over Washburn, he changed his mind.

"We finally put a whole game together with the offense and defense clicking together," said Boroff. "Burke had a good game and we played him more than usual because we felt it was a pretty critical game." Burke had been alternating with two other backs in Kearney's first five games.

"We were helped by a loss in our second game of the season," said Boroff. "It made all of us aware that we weren't as far along in development as we thought. But now we are progressing."

"Our defense played well and provided the turning point for the game," said Boroff. With Kearney leading, 8-3, late in the third quarter, the Antelopes turned the ball over to Washburn on the KSC 3-yard line when a punt snap went high.

"We held them and I think that gave us the biggest boost of the game," said Boroff. Kearney went on to score four touchdowns in the fourth quarter and gave up just one more Washburn score, an 80-yard kickoff run back.

In other weekend highlights, Peru's Gary Rosenbeck rushed for 184 yards on 25 carries and scored two touchdowns to lead the Bobcats to their first win this season, a 28-24 victory over Chadron.

Concordia's Gary Seever passed for two touchdowns to Tom Frazier and scored on a one-yard run but two missed extra points helped Dana win, 20-18. Seever's pass for 252 yards. Dana's win gave Viking coach Gary Seever's first win over brother John, Sr. coach of the Bulldogs.

God, ace aid Baird in victory

San Antonio, Tex. (UPI) — Veteran Butch Baird, with a hole-in-one and help he attributed to God, sank a 10-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden death playoff with Miller Barber Sunday to win the $125,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament.

It was the first victory in 11 years for the 40-year-old pro. Baird forced the playoff by sinking a 182-yard hole-in-one on the par-three 12th hole, then pushed in a critical 15-foot birdie on the 72nd hole to tie Barber at 15-under 273 at the end of regulation play.

"Everything went my way," Baird said. "God was smiling on me."

Barber, who held a three-stroke lead after the third round, which was also played Sunday, appeared headed for victory until Baird, playing in the same threesome with the leader, hit his ace.

Barber picked up a check for $14,245 for the second place finish, while Baird collected the $25,000 first prize to run his earnings to $82,976 for the year and $264,864 for his career.

Cincinnati's speed did Yankees in Cincinnati (UPI) — In the end, it was the intimidating Cincinnati Reds' speed which did in the New York Yankees in the second game of the 1976 World Series.

Yankee shortstop Fred Stanley, whose throwing error on Ken Griffey's ninth inning grounder set up the eventual winning run in Sunday night's 4-3 victory, admitted as much.

"He's got 38 base hits," said Stanley in reference to the speedy Griffey, "so I knew he could run. I won't second guess myself. I didn't have time to plant my foot and I hurried my throw."

"If I'd have wanted to play it safe I could have. I could have played back and conceded the ball or I could have charged it and taken an extra step. Either way Griffey would have been safe. In that kind of play, you've got to try and make the throw."

Prior to Stanley's error, Yankee ace Catfish Hunter had survived a rocky start and retired 15 out of 16 batters while his teammates rallied from a 3-0 deficit to tie the score. But when Griffey reached second on Stanley's errant throw, which went into the Cincinnati dugout, Hunter was forced to walk Joe Morgan intentionally and pitch to Tony Perez.

"I respect Perez as a hitter," explained Yankee Manager Billy Martin, "but I'd still rather pitch to him than the other guy (Morgan)."

Perez, who went 0-for-15 through the first four World Series games a year ago, is off to a sizzling start against the Yankees—three hits Saturday and two more Sunday night.

Reds Manager Sparky Anderson said there couldn't have been a better hitter at the plate in Sunday night's tense situation than Perez.

"Griffey getting to second was another example of the way the Reds force the issue—pressure you all the time," said Morgan. "Griffey's speed forced Stanley to hurry his throw. We're always forcing the issue."

Hunter, who was in trouble in both the first and second innings before being tagged for three runs in the third, said the pitch Perez hit was a fastball which "just got away from me. It was right down the middle."

As for his early inning problems, Hunter refused to blame the unseasonably cold (41 degree weather).

"I was looking for the cold weather so it didn't bother me," Hunter said. "My problem was with the pitching mound. I just couldn't get used to it at first. It was too hard and I kept landing differently after each pitch. I just could get a hold on it."

Despite the two wins at home, Anderson still apparently isn't all that confident about

Dorsett, walk-on pep Pitt start

United Press International

The University of Pittsburgh is off to its best start in 38 years and Coach Johnny Majors has two players to thank — one of whom is a walk-on, the other a runon.

The walk-on, Tom Yewic, and the run-on, Tony Dorsett, were the catalysts in Pittsburgh's 36-19 victory over Miami of Florida Saturday, which kept the No. 2 ranked Panthers undefeated in six games this season.

Yewic, an inexperienced senior playing without a scholarship, became the big man on Pittsburgh's campus when the team's two top quarterbacks, Robert Haygood and Matt Cavanaugh, were lost to injuries during the past month. Yewic, in his first starting assignment, directed the Panther offense to 341 yards and threw a 40-yard scoring pass to Dorsett.

Dorsett ran onto the Pittsburgh campus in his first day as a freshman and has never stopped. His 277 yards and three touchdowns Saturday polished his Heisman Trophy credentials, as it was Dorsett's 14th straight 100-yard game and sixth career 200-yard game.

"I don't think Pitt football had a better game in its history," said Panthers' Coach Johnny Majors. "I don't want to be overly dramatic, but under the circumstances we never had a quarterback perform better. It was our team's finest hour and Tony Dorsett's finest hour."

In addition to his 40-yard TD reception, Dorsett scored on runs of 3 and 53 yards. His performance left him just 151 yards short of equalling Archie Griffin's NCAA major college rushing record of 5,177 yards.

Carson Long added field goals of 25 and 39 yards and four extra points to the Pittsburgh cause. Willie Taylor chipped in a seven-yard TD run and cornerback LeRoy Felder rounded out the scoring by tackling a Miami ball carrier in the end zone for a safety.

In other games involving top 10 teams, No. 1 Michigan mauled Northwestern, 38-7; No. 3 Nebraska smothered Kansas State, 51-0; No. 4 UCLA destroyed Washington State, 52-3; No. 5 Oklahoma defeated No. 18 Kansas, 28-10; No. 6 Maryland squeaked past Wake Forest, 17-15; No. 7 Missouri was upset by Iowa State, 21-17; No. 9 Ohio State defeated Wisconsin, 30-20, and No. 10 Texas Tech bounced Rice, 37-16.

Michigan increased its record to 6-0 as senior running back Rob Lytle scored two touchdowns and rushed for 172 yards to pass Ron Johnson and move into third place on the Wolverines' all-time rushing list.

Quarterback Jeff Dankworth threw for two touchdowns and ran for two more in leading UCLA's rout of Washington State.

Collegian boots FG 69 yards!

The Associated Press

A pair of Texas college football players kicked their ways into the record books Saturday, and a career touchdown mark also took a tumble.

Ove Johannson booted a 69-yard field goal in Abilene Christian's victory over East Texas State to set NAIA and collegiate marks, and Tony Franklin kicked barefoot field goals of 64 and 65 yards in Texas A&M's victory over Baylor. Franklin's 64-yarder eclipsed the NCAA mark of 63 by Clark Kemble of Colorado State. The 65-yarder came later.

"The second one I kicked would have been good from 70 yards," Franklin said. "I couldn't believe the first one and I was dumbfounded by the second one. I thought I must be dreaming."

Johannson's mammoth, soccer-style boot was the second collegiate record set in the game by Abilene Christian. Tailback Wilbert Montgomery scored his 67th touchdown in the game, breaking the mark of 66 by Walter Payton at Jackson State. Payton now plays for the Chicago Bears of the NFL.

Johannson and Franklin weren't the only collegians given the hotfoot over the weekend. Vince Fusco put six field goals through the uprights, including a 57-yarder, in Duke's 18-18 tie of Clemson in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The six shots in one game tied an NCAA record.

OU has 'Lott' of luck, KU has none

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — While fifth-ranked Oklahoma was finding the solution to its offensive problems Saturday afternoon, 18th-ranked Kansas' were just beginning.

Sophomore quarterback Thomas Lott, given the ball inside the Kansas 40 four times in the second half, ran for 104 yards and two touchdowns in leading Oklahoma to a 28-10 win over Kansas. It was revenge for the only loss the Sooners have suffered in four years—23-3 to Kansas a year ago.

"Thomas Lott became a football player today," said Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, who played Lott for the second straight week while regular Dean Blevins was hospitalized with an infection. "We always knew he had the speed and equipment to run the football well and he proved it today."

While Lott was proving that, Nolan Cromwell was proving just how important he was to the success of the Kansas wishbone offense. Midway through the third quarter, with the scored tied 10-10, Cromwell was lost for the season with a knee injury, which required surgery, and Kansas' offense ground to a halt.

Cromwell's backup, Scott McMichael, was intercepted twice and unable to lead the Jayhawk offense to even one first down.

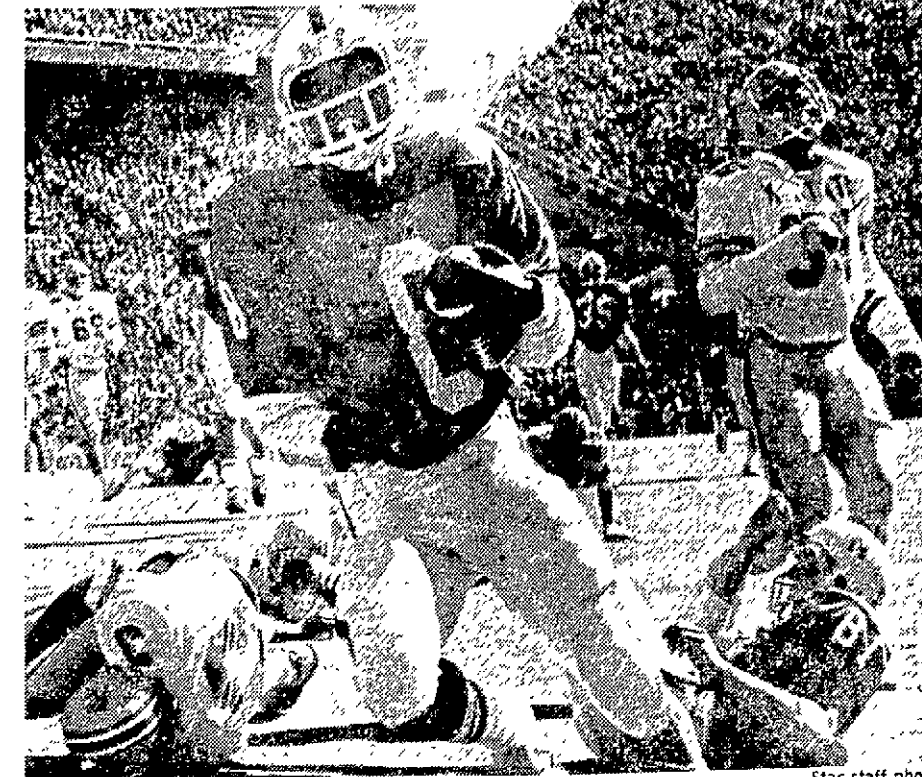

While that was happening in Lawrence, Iowa State continued its bid for national recognition by running its record to 5-1 with a 21-17 upset of seventh-ranked Missouri. Colorado scored 10 points in the final 43 seconds for a 20-10 win over No. 20 Oklahoma State; and third-ranked Nebraska routed Kansas State, the lone Big Eight team with a sub .500 record, 51-0.

Oklahoma, which saw linebacker Obie Moore recover three fumbles, had bad news in victory too as it lost for the season defensive backs Jerry Anderson and Scott Hill with injuries and offensive tackle Mike Vaughan may be out with a knee injury too.

Iowa State running back Dexter Green ran for 214 yards and two touchdowns. The Cyclones, who built a 21-3 lead, also scored in the second quarter when former quarterback Buddy Hardeman, playing at slotback, took a handoff from quarterback Wayne Stanley and threw a 36-yard pass to Stanley.

"It was a heck of a game...our biggest win," said Iowa State coach Earle Bruce. "I was so happy I couldn't talk with the team after the game."

Leading 10-6 with less than a minute to play, Oklahoma State appeared en route to a win over Colorado when safety Jerry Cramer intercepted Colorado's Jeff Knappe in the end zone. But instead of taking a touchback and giving his team the ball on the 20, Cramer tried to run the interception back, was hit at the one-yard line and fumbled the ball away. Jim Kelleher then plunged over from a yard out for the winning touchdown.

Nebraska's Bobby Thomas caught a 15-yard pass for the first of three TDs he scored against Kansas State Saturday

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
